Plan for SP depot fizzles out

There was assurance the depot will not be destroyed.

PLEASANTON — Loretto Winery Limited, owner of Villa Armando Winery here, has pulled out of negotiations to lease the old Southern Pacific depot on First and Neal streets as a restaurant.

SP spokesman Oscar Osness heard the news yesterday.

In a letter to SP, the winery indicated property disputes and potential parking problems discouraged the company from concluding the lease.

Osness dispelled rumors that SP might tear the circa 1900 station house down now that negotiations have fallen through.

"I don't see it ever being torn down, definitely not. There are too many people interested in the property with its historical value. We'd move it before we would consider tearing it down," said the railroad's senior land agent.

While the winery's change of heart does put plans for the old structure up in the air, Osness says he plans to re-open negotiations with other restaurants which have expressed interest in the building.

He notes that several small businesses, including an antique store and a flower shop, have suggested adding railroad cars to the property to make small boutiques. The boutiques would be added on to restaurant plans only if the person leasing the depot would agree, Osness notes.

SP began to file a tentative subdivision map with the planning department here almost six weeks ago, but found it must complete a geological study first because an earthquake fault runs through the immediate area.

The vacant depot previously housed the Pleasanton Glass Company. After the company moved out, a couple proposed to use the depot as a sandwich shop, but that plan was discouraged by both the city and SP.

Osness still hopes to find someone interested in putting a "good" restaurant in the historic building, even though he felt the winery would have been a "good choice" and regrets the change in plans.

Police chief's resignation sparks probe

Events that led to the forced resignation of Livermore Police Chief Ronald Lindgren will be investigated by the district attorney's office "for information only," The Times learned yesterday.

Livermore City Manager Bill Parness called the district attorney's office yesterday and invited inspectors to pour over material provided by the city that apparently explains the facts behind the sudden resignation.

Lindgren called The Times late yesterday from his Livermore home and confidently read a one-line prepared statement: "I welcome the investigation by the district attorney's office." He refused to comment further.

Parness said the decision to ask the district attorney's office for an investigation was designed "to stifle rumors because a man's reputation is at stake." City officials had declined to ask for an official investigation of the matter Wednesday when the resignation became known.

The decision to request an investigation was "not entirely my decision," Parness declared. Alameda County Supervisor Valerie Raymond had called District Attorney Lowell Jensen about the matter, he said, although Parness made the phone call offering to "turn over all the material at our disposal."

Parness said the investigation was for information only and that no criminal indictments would result.

Supervisor Raymond was not available for comment.

City officials have maintained the resignation resulted from a difference of management styles and that no misconduct was involved. But the suddenness of the resignation coupled with secrecy surrounding the occurrence has led many observers to think more was involved.

Parness used public funds to hire a private investigator who watched Lindgren's activities for an unspecified amount of time. That investigation was apparently discussed at an executive session of the city council Monday night and is believed to have been a factor in the resignation.

Lindgren, 39, had been police chief for five years. Captain Jack Essex has been appointed acting chief until a permanent chief is found.

Acting chief not seeking lasting post

LIVERMORE — A nationwide hunt for a new police chief has begun as acting Acting Chief Jack Essex announced he is definitely not a candidate to fill the position former Chief Ronald Lindgren vacated suddenly Wednesday.

Essex told The Times yesterday he met with officers on all patrol shifts and reservists to assure them that operations would continue basically unchanged. He asked them for input and assistance in the job he expects to hold two to three months until a new chief is appointed.

"Everything seems to be going fairly smoothly," Essex said yesterday. He has assigned Lt. Gary Souza to replace him as head of investigations and to coordinate activities of the Tri-Valley Drug Unit, a Valley-wide narcotics unit formerly under the chief's control.

Essex will continue to oversee the Horizon's youth counseling program.

Lindgren, 39, announced his resignation Wednesday listing only "apparently irreconcilable differences with the city manager on my managemnt styles and tasks" as a reason.

City Manager Bill Parness had hired a private investigator to scrutinize Lindgren's activities. The matter apparently came to a head in a city council executive session Monday night based on the results of that investigation.

Essex said he anticipated no other changes in procedure. He will remain acting chief until a successor is found, at which time he will work in whatever capacity asked of him by the new chief, he stated.

UC-Berkeley debate

Ellsberg bombs nuclear policy

BERKELEY — Deployment of the neutron bomb, developed by Lawrence Livermore Laboratory, would vastly increase the chances of an all-out nuclear confrontation, anti-war activist Dr. Daniel Ellsberg said yesterday.

Ellsberg's remarks came in a two-hour debate with LLL Lowell Wood before more than 100 students at UC-Berkeley's Stawberry College.

While not formally representing the lab, Wood appeared at the college's invitation to resume a debate started by Ellsberg last month on KQED.

Despite Wood's point the neutron bomb could destroy both lives and physical property (contrary to earlier descriptions) he emphatically called it a "defensive weapon."

Wood said the bomb was designed to cut collateral damage (to both sides) by limiting its effective range to one-half to three-quarters of a mile.

Noting it was intended first for NATO to counter growing Eastern Block conventional forces he added repeatedly "any way to kill people is horrible."

"It's not a magic wand that will have a revolutionary effect on the nature of warfare," he added.

Amid discussions of "tank armies" and "deterence" Ellsberg's major point was the neutron bomb could contribute greatly to nuclear proliferation and increase the odds of war.

"The idea of defending Europe with nuclear weapons is madness," he said, adding, "it is the most likely nuclear weapon to be used since Hiroshima" because the military sought to convince the public the bomb's effects would be minimal.

He contended differences between the sizes of nuclear weapons blurred and said, "if nuclear weapons are too horrible to use, I'm of the conclusion we should have no more." Ellsberg is currently a member of the Mobilization For Survival, a coalition of anti-war groups that conduct lectures. — by Tom Burke

Boost for parks

— The Dublin San Ramon Services District (DSRSD) is $22,500 richer in state recreation money it almost lost and it has the East Bay Regional Park District to thank.

State officials said the services district was ineligible for any direct state grants but could obtain an allocation from the East Bay Parks District.

Trustee job open

The Murray School District is accepting applications through 10 a.m. Monday, Jan. 30 for the trustee position vacated by Bob Foster.

A one-page resume may be sent to Peter W. Snyder, president, Murray School District board, 7416 Brighton Dr., Dublin 94566. A one-page statement concerning education is optional.

A candidates night is scheduled the night of the 30th and interviews by trustees on Feb. 6. An appointment will be made on or before Feb. 14.

Realty office hit

More than $3,000 of electronic equipment was stolen from the Century 21 real estate office at 7031 Village Parkway, Dublin, Wednesday night, the sheriff's department reported.

Burglars pried open the front door and took a video tape recorder and accompanying television set, a tape player and electric typewriter, a sheriff's department spokesman said.

Fingerprints were lifted at the scene. The investigation is continuing.

SR school aid

Builders moan about that fee

Lesher News Bureau

MARTINEZ — Builders say the proposed minimum $300 fee per home or apartment is too high a price to pay to provide temporary school facilities in the county's overcrowded school districts.

Dean La Field of the Associated Building Industry made these remarks Tuesday at a public hearing on a proposed county ordinance that would implement recently enacted state legislation obligating developers to bear the financial burden for easing overcrowded schools.

By a 3-1 vote, county supervisors voted to delay action on the ordinance until next Tuesday to give themselves more time to study proposed amendments.

Senate Bill 201, which became effective Jan. 1, calls for developers to pay fees, dedicate land, or a combination of both for interim school facilities where overcrowding exists.

Tuesday's testimony came from members of a committee appointed by the board who worked with the county planning staff in drawing up the ordinance. These included representatives of the building industry as well as school district officials.

La Field told the board the $300 minimum fee after the first bedroom should be cut to $225 not to exceed $675. The proposed ordinance calls for a maximum of $900.

Furthermore, San Ramon Valley developer Robert Carrow said, if a developer could prove his subdivision would not add the overcrowded conditions, such as an all adult development, he should be exempt from paying fees.

Superintendent Allan Petersdorf of the already overcrowded San Ramon Valley Unified School District disagreed with La Field saying his own district's current bedroom tax for school construction had to be hiked from $225 to $188 per unit because of rising costs.

In fact, Petersdorf said the ordinance should include an inflationary clause which could subsequently raise the price.

Under the new bill, for a school district to be eligible for fees it must prove to the Board of Supervisors that overcrowding does indeed exist, in what areas it exists, and it must show that all reasonable methods for alleviating the situation have already been tired.

If county supervisors agree, they may then prohibit any residential development within the overcrowded areas unless overriding circumstances would benefit the county.

School districts are required to specify how they intend to use the land or fees, and must file a report at the end of the fiscal year showing how the fees have been spent.

By Aug. 1 of each year, districts must also note which areas are still overcrowded.

County school districts which could be in line for money are the San Ramon Valley Unified School District, the John Swett District in Crockett-Rodeo, the Clayton area of the Mt. Diablo School District and the Byron Union School District.

Kottinger

A manager may be hired

PLEASANTON — Elderly residents in federally subsidized Kottinger Place apartments may get a resident manager, as well as a working emergency alarm system, after all.

Urged by a dozen senior tenants, Housing Authority commissioners have set Monday, 10 a.m., at the Kottinper Place meeting room as the time for a newly formed committee of tenants and commissioners to study the feasibility of hiring a live-in manager for the project.

The committee, formed Wednesday during the authorities regular monthly meeting, will also decide precisely what tenants want in the new call system recently funded to replace the faulty one which hasn't worked properly for almost three years.

Armed with a list of questions, one woman brought the subject on many tenants' minds to the forefront as soon as Wednesday's meeting got under way.

"We think we need a manager in here. And we should have one."

Another woman quickly pointed out the brochure handed to new residents says there is a manager to take care of emergencies. But the five-year-old housing complex has been without a manager for three years.

Commissioners explained that the original manager, an older woman who qualified to live at Kottinger, quit because the duties were too harsh. She had been given free rent and a small sum each month.

Housing director Michael Parsons said the authority has about $3,000, according to his assistant, to pay for a manager.

Cultural festival Saturday

There will be a variety of international foods and entertainment during the American Association of University Nomen's Multi-cultural Festival, to be held this Saturday from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Veterans Hall, Fifth and L Streets, Livermore.

The free festival should be a treat for area residents, who can munch on crepes and, Vietnamese Cha Gio (an egg roll-type of concoction) or other interntational goodies. A stage will provide entertainment by Greek dancers, the Society of American Indian dancers, the Del Valle folk dance club, the Valley Travelers square dance group, Filipino dancers and martial arts groups.

Foods, which will range from French specialties to Filipino fare, will be doled out to hungry visitors at 10 cents a sample — so that area gourmets can fill their plates for a fine price.

Demonstrations of martial arts will be included, to be performed by the local Japanese-American Association. International dance is scheduled thoughout the event. Some of the groups participating will include the Greek Parthenon Taverna Dancers, based in Oakland, who will perform ethnic numbers.

The local Filipino-America group, made up of six high school students from the area, will perform what is known as the "Tinikling-a bamboo" dance.

The Del Valle Folk Dance Club is slated to perform international numbers, and other groups will contribute to the festive atmosphere.

In addition, folktales, music and demonstrations of food and crafts will be on hand. The event is open to the public, and there is no admission charge.

School officials' workshop

Teacher strikes pose threat

"A strike is devastating; the physical and emotional violence that went on in our schools was very traumatic. I hope I never see anything like that again," Dr. James Slezak, superintendent of the Mount Diablo Unified School District, fitfully commented to an audience of some 225 school board members and administrators from throughout Alameda County Thursday.

Slezak, who heads the large Contra Costa County district that went through a drawn out strike last fall, was one of four speakers at a workshop on collective bargaining and school leadership at Castlewood Country Club in Pleasanton.

Slezak and William Rogers, director of public education for San Juan Unified School District, spoke in tandem while Heidi Williamson, of the California School Boards Association, and UCLA education professor Dr. Richard Williams spoke as a team in an adjoining room.

Noting that teachers in his district had still not signed a contract that calls for an 8 per cent salary hike, Slezak opined "All of us have lots of maturing, lots of growing up to do in the area of employee-employer relations."

He termed the strike in his district "the most terrible thing I've experienced in my 16 years as an educator in this state."

Slezak then proceeded to discuss strategy in preparing for a strike.

"If you have any inkling that a strike is going to occur, you've got to have your substitutes ready. And please don't call on your regular substitutes that you've assigned during the year, as crossing picket lines will make it tough on them," Slezak stated.

The district has 2,000 teachers and, as Slezak commented, the district proceeded to "identify" 3,000 substitutes as "ready and willing to cross picket lines."

"We started working on quality (of substitute teachers) from the first day so that those who were not proficient were not brought back the next day."

"We made sure the principals, those out on the lines, had plenty of support," Slezak continued. "We made sure communication lines between the various schools and central district offices were open at all times."

Dr. Williams, who served as Supt. Bruce Newlin's faculty advisor on his dissertation, said his studies of collective bargaining had evidenced two conclusions.

"The research base on collective bargaining is practically nonexistent. Nobody is addressing the question in any substantive way." Williams also felt that the consequences of collective bargaining (on school districts and residents thereof) are not nearly as much as I would have suspected."

Ms. Williamson, an employment relations counselor for the California School Boards Association, spoke on "the California experience and where we're going."

Dr. Newlin served as coordinator of the workshop. A dinner program followed the workshop at which Dr. Glenn Hoffman of the Santa Clara County Schools office spoke.

Pipeline vote plan delayed

The CARD Committee's initiative seeking voter approval or denial for the valley's $28 million waste water export pipeline will not be on the March 7 ballot, according to Ken Scheidig, attorney for the Livermore - Amador Valley Water Management Agency.

CARD intends to take initiative petitions before LAVWMA Feb. 1, which wouldn't give the agency the required time to check out signatures and put it on the ballot before March.

Also, the initiative is valley-wide and must be on a valley-wide ballot, the next one being June 6 according to Scheidig.

CARD chairperson Wally Mayer told The Times it shouldn't matter greatly if the initiative misses the March ballot. CARD will ask for a court injunction halting construction until the issue does get on the June ballot, he indicated.

But Scheidig believes CARD's missing the March ballot will reduce the 30-member group's chances of putting the pipeline before voters.

LAVWMA plans to begin construction in February. If the board decides the initiative is not valid, CARD would have to go to court to stop construction.

As prolonged delay of the project could endanger state and federal funding, Scheidig doesn't think a judge would grant an injunction.

A year ago November, Livermore, San Ramon and Dublin voters turned down a smaller pipeline, but Pleasanton approved it. CARD argues that all voters should approve it before the project is built.

Water rates follow costs

Water districts claim the reason consumers may be paying more money for less water is due to escalating operational costs that have been bumped up by the general inflationary spiral.

According to David Vossbrink, public information representative for East Bay Municipal Utilities District (EBMUD), these costs include rising prices of water treatment chemicals such as chlorine and of Pacific Gas and Electric (PG&E) power.

Other items involve pipe replacements, helping foot the bill for the Middle River pumping plant, administrative fees and other "fixed costs" of running a water works.

Vossbrink said administrative fees entered into the picture when staff had to spend "a lot of overtime figuring out a fair way to implement mandatory water rationing."

"Three years ago our PG&E bill was $800,000," Vossbrink continued. "Last year it ran $2.25 million."

EBMUD tacked on a surcharge to offset loss of revenues that resulted from mandatory water rationing. A second "across the board" surcharge of five cents has been proposed but could be reduced, Vossbrink said.

EBMUD plans to consider a rate increase Jan. 24, Vossbrink said.

"Even if there had been no drought, EBMUD planned to have a general rate increase," he continued.

A spokesman for the Dublin San Ramon Services District (DSRSD) said, "The district is not considering any rate change at this time."

Jim Walker, assistant to Pleasanton's city manager, said a rate increase was likely for that city since it had not had one since Feb. 10, 1975. If an increase is approved, it would become effective prior to July 1, 1978, Walker said.

He said they were able to hold off this long because they have been able to absorb Zone 7 rate increases. Pleasanton buys water from Zone 7, a water district that sells water wholesale.

Livermore is reviewing rates since they have not raised since Feb. 1976, according to Randy Warner, engineer for the Livermore Water Department.

"We held off during the drought but inflation caught up with us in our operational and maintenance costs."

California Water Service Company, which serves a portion of Livermore, said their surcharge (effective for six months) would end in March. They increased their general rates due to higher costs related to PG&E power, according to a spokesman.

Zone 7 Acting General Manager Mun Mar said they would "reconsider" a rate raise next year. He added that consumers "were to be commended" for their excellent response to voluntary water rationing. They were asked to reduce 25 per cent and attained 24 per cent reduction, Mar said.

Proposal for new housing alarm

"I don't know if what we could offer would attract a manager, at least a good manager," he said, adding he would prefer to see a young manager capable of handling many duties, possibly even maintenance work.

"Can't we try though?," asked commissioner Christine Pearson.

Pearson also noted that many projects for seniors have an older adult as manager and one woman in the audience muttered, "We're not senile and decrepit."

The need for a manager and working emergency system was spotlighted weeks ago when tenants' fears surfaced after a Kottinger resident died of a heart attack and wasn't discovered in her apartment for four or five days.

Commissioner Edmond Alves talked Wednesday about having a live-in manager on duty nights and weekends only. The maintenance man, he said, could serve as manager during weekdays— as one currently does.

If the manager also did maintenance work, that could eliminate the need for one of the current maintenance employees, thus doubling the money available for a manager, another person thoupht.

And, again, it was suggested finding an elderly couple who qualifies to live in the low-income apartments, giving them free rent and a small salary.

But commissioners decided to leave any decision on the alternatives up to the joint committee to work out Monday. They told tenants Kottinger Place isn't eligible for federal funding for a manager and won't be unless the authority takes in higher income tenants.

Parsons also described a proposal submitted by Edwards Engineers for a new emergency alarm system. That is the same company that manufactured the present faulty system. However, Parsons indicated the system hasn't worked properly due to faulty underground wiring put in by a construction company when the apartments were built.

Foley calls for cut in city budget 'fat'

PLEASANTON — Police and fire protection lack here, according to John Foley, a 33-year-old city council candidate.

"After 3 a.m., we have only two street officers on duty," he says, referring to the police force.

"The perfect situation is one officer per 1,000 population. Ne have about .8 of an officer per 1,000," he adds.

Needless to say, Foley would concentrate on beefing up the police force, as well as fire department if elected to one of the two open council seats March 7.

Relatively new, Foley moved to Pleasanton with his wife and young daughter 15 months ago. But already he sees the need for holding property taxes down.

The difficult question, however, is how to increase public safety without also increasing taxes.

"I think it could be financed with existing monies," says the purchasing agent for Bostrom-Bergen Metal Products, based in Oakland.

While examining the city's budget, Foley found that the engineering department's budget has increased 30 percent in the past three years. Yet the permits being issued have gone down 60 percent, according to Foley. Planning and zoning fees are down 9 percent, he adds.

All this leads him to believe the city could trim fat in several departments, thus paying for extra safety personnel without increasing the tax rate.

John Foley

Foley says the safety need was pointed out to him by several friends on the force here. Other than that lack, however, he feels the city is going in the right direction.

The candidate wouldn't cut back recreation funds, as two other candidates have said they would, because that budget essentially hasn't changed in the past three years.

Council candidate

But he favors changing the emphasis in the department from large sports parks to smaller neighborhood and tot parks.

"We need more recreation for those very young and teenagers. I think there is plenty for children between about 10 and 14 to do, but there aren't enough tot lots and teens don't seem to have anything in parks for them."

By changing the emphasis of parks, Foley thinks the small neighborhood parks could be built up without additional tax cost. In fact, he's in favor of freezing the tax rate, if at all possible.

The controversial LAVWMA pipeline is "a necessary evil" to Foley.

"I'm not really for it, but we need it to get us out of the sewer situation we're in now. I would have to vote for it from the information I have now," he explains.

Foley is also in favor of the city building its own sewage treatment plant to replace the aging Sunol plant, instead of combining with the Dublin, San Ramon Services District (DSRSD) in their large plant.

He fears previous legal entanglements between DSRSD and developers will drag the city down. But he believes the northern section of the city already serviced by DSRSD should stay with that district.

Although a strong supporter of police and fire personnel, Foley is adamantly against public employee strikes.

"I don't think you can serve more than one master and if you're working for the public you can't walk out on them."

Some city personnel, he suspects could be cut, citing maintenance crews as an example.

"Other cities have really cut costs by doing away with street maintenance crews and hiring on from union halls when work needs to be done." he says.

Foley says he hasn't studied the sewer and growth issues deely enough to make opinions on the current city plans with the residential allocation program, adding, however, that "it sounds like a lot of lawsuits."

Regarding low and middle income housing, he supports the housing authority, saying it is "fairly in place with needs" of lower income residents who use public housing. But he thinks the open market place can contain soaring housing costs for middle and upper income residants — and advises against mandating developers to build some homes at low cost to hold prices down.

His campaign is "an individual effort right now." Later he hopes to begin door-to-door campaigning and meeting with voters in small groups.

County's budget policies reviewed

OAKLAND — The theory looked good to Alameda County Supervisor John George.

The people, especially the supervisors, ought to know all of the things various department heads want to put in the budget for the coming year.

As it is now, many of their requests get chopped out by County Admin istrator Loren Enoch, then forwarded to the supervisors. That stifles the whole process of some important public policy decisions, said George. Supervisors should know what items were axed and why. Maybe some were more meritorious than the survivors, said George.

His colleagues did not agree. If you allow supervisors in the meetings, you might get three or more attending. Then the state's public meeting Brown Act would come into play and the press and public could attend, too.

That was fine with George, who feels the public has a right to that much information about how its money is being spent. But the other supervisors felt it would be too unwieldy.

Supervisors Joseph Bort moved that the current setup continue and his motion passed 4-1 with George, logically enough, opposing it.

George got a small compromise, though. Supervisors will have access to the working papers which are used by the department heads in preparing their budget requests. He's not happy with the solution, but he will "acquiesce to it," he said.

Sheriff-coroner split nixed

MARTINEZ — Contra Costa County supervisors took action on 13 issues during their board session this week.

They voted three to two not to separate the offices of sheriff and coroner. The board's internal operations committee, however, will review suggestions for possible internal changes in the coroner's office. Supervisors Nancy Fahden and James Kenny dissented.

Suggested amendments were received to the county's draft ordinance to set up a "bedroom tax" for developers to finance school construction. The board will make its final decision on the ordinance Jan. 24.

Approval was given to the county's 1978-79 Housing and Community Development Program which will expend $4 million for community projects to help low and middle-income families.

Agreement was reached to apply for a $45,000 state grant to educate teenagers on the subject of unplanned pregnancies. Supervisors James Kenny and Robert Schroder dissented.

They agreed to extend through January retroactive pay benefits that may be agreed upon in current wage negotiations with county firefighters.

Supervisors reaffirmed their opposition to CALTRANS' refusal to build a median barrier on the new Antioch bridge.

They agreed to invite proponents and opponents of the Jarvis-Gann initiative on local government financing to debate the issues before the board.

Agreement was reached to post signs preventing parking of commercial vehicles in residential areas whenever enough complaints are received. The board was told it has this power under two sections of the California Vehicle Code.

They agreed to allow the county hospital to set up a program to train nurses who need to update their knowledge and skills in order to help fill nursing vacancies at the hospital.

A report was received from County Administrator Arthur Will concerning county department experiences with flexible employe work schedules.

All agreed to write a letter to AC Transit urging management to bring the drivers' strike to a close in the public interest.

A contract was approved with Paul F. O'Rourke, M.D. not to exceed $44,500 to complete a study on suggested organizational setups for the county's health care services.

The board session was adjourned in memory of U.S. Senator Hubert Humphrey.

Sunol Glen board fills school seat

SUNOL — Dennis Smith, a 36-year old engineer employed at General Electric-Vallecitos, has been appointed on an interim basis to fill the vacated Sunol Glen School District board position of Jim Ackerman.

A resident of Sunol for seven years, Smith was appointed at Mondaynight's school board meeting. He will fill the vacated position until the next regularly-scheduled election for district governing board members.

Smith and his wife, Judie, have a son in the second grade at Sunol Glen and a daughter in the fifth grade. Mrs. Smith has worked with a school-community involvement committee.

Prior to coming to Sunol, the Smiths resided in Livermore.

DSRSD revamps seniors' program

DUBLIN — The Senior Californians of Dublin-San Ramon underwent a format revamping by the Dublin San Ramon Services District (DSRSD).

DSRSD co-sponsors the senior group which is a social club for people 50 years and older. DSRSD directors changed some rulings during a regular board session this week.

Changes were provoked by the fact a high percentage of club members are non-residents of the district. An 80 per cent residency is required by other re co-sponsored groups, according to Brian May, DSRSD senior recreation leader. He is responsible for planning recreational activities for the district's senior group. Approximately 55 per cent of the club members reside within district boundaries, May stated.

He added, "The problem now at hand basically deals with club members, privileges and residencies and their relationship to district support ..."

Board rulings included not allowing any new non-resident members to join.

Also, a two-part priority system was instigated. If DSRSD implements an activity or program, district resident club members have priority on anything pertaining to that activity or program.

If the Senior Californians club implements the activity or program, club members, regardless of district status, would have priority.

Another change involved leaving the present membership as it is; a mixture of resident and non-resident. This change was amended with, "non-resident members cannot hold club offices or vote on policy matters."

However, current club officers are exempted from the above change.

What's ahead for CC County

Business should grow in '78

By RICK VOGT
Business Editor

Businessmen listen intently to economic predictions for 1978 at Wednesday's Business Outlook conference.

Economically, Contra Costa's going to continue growing, business leaders were told at a "Business Outlook" conference in Concord Wednesday.

The conference, sponsored by the Contra Costa Development Association and 14 city chambers of commerce, featured a variety of speakers, all forecasting the future of business in the county.

Boiling it all down, growth, economically and otherwise, in the county will slow down a bit in 1978 but by no means will it stop.

In fact, the current rains are enhancing the future of some industries and prompted water district officials at the conference to give bright short-range predictions.

Water rationing will probably stop, said Craig Randall of the Contra Costa Water District and Donald Larkin of the East Bay Municipal Utility District.

But Randall warned that the county and its business leaders must back legislation that would finance construction of the Peripheral Canal in order to avoid severe water shortages in the mid-1980s.

Nolan Daines, vice president of planning and research for Pacific Gas & Electric, told the crowd of businessmen that more electric and natural gas power should be available in the coming year.

He warned, though, that unless PG&E is allowed to build more electricity generating plants in the state, the utility will be faced with a shortage of power in the early 1980s. So far, PG&E has plans for a new coal-fired plant at Collinsville and an addition to its Pittsburg generating plant. A Modesto area nuclear plant is also proposed, Daines said.

As for employment in the county, Tom Graves, assistant vice president and economist for Security Pacific Bank, predicts the unemployment rate will remain about the same — at a seasonally adjusted 7.5 percent.

Graves said that the number of jobs increased in 1977 at a rate of 5 percent. This year that should drop to about 3 or 4 percent, he predicted.

He said government spending "is the bright spot in the economy for 1978."

Woody Pereira, Shapell Industries' director of planning, predicted another good year for the county's homebuilding industry.

As with other sectors of the county's economy, he sees a reduction of growth but nothing serious.

Pereira predicted that property will appreciate at between 7 and 8 percent a year in the coming years, compared to past annual increases of up to 24 percent.

He warned of state and regional government plans which could limit growth and stressed that the only places population growth can be curtailed are "in the bedroom and at the state line. And it's been shown you can't do either effectively."

Industrial and heavy construction will continue to grow and "the future looks very bright," said Peter Muller of the Associated General Contractors of California.

Construction projects for Contra Costa include the Antioch Bridge, plant expansion by the Central Sanitary District, additions to Walnut Creek's Ygnacio Valley industrial park area, construction of Civic Park Plaza in Walnut Creek, several county building projects, oil refinery expansions, new power plants and a million square-foot shopping center just across the Alameda County line in Pleasanton.

Muller, too, warned that growth restrictions proposed by regional government could have a "major impact" on construction in Contra Costa and the rest of the Bay area.

Richard Lambert of Coldwell Banker Real Estate told those attending the conference he foresees continued building of commercial and office buildings through the remainder of the year.

And while Lambert says there's a possibility the county may be "overbuilt" as a result, "there's no cause for alarm" because the need for offices and commercial space will soon catch up with the supply.

Tom Eddy, director of the Port of Richmond, predicted a need for increased port facilities in Contra Costa, noting that the county has a heavy volume of shipping to ports along the Carquinez Strait and Suisun Bay.

He said the county should push for the construction of the Richmond reach of the Baldwin Channel. Eddy acknowledged that there may be environmental stumbling blocks to construction of the remainder of the project.

County Agricultural Commissioner Ken Danielson said the recent rain has brightened Contra Costa's agricultural outlook. There should be an increase in the livestock industry which fell off sharply because of the drought. Other crops should show increases.

Robert Schoettler of the Fresno Convention Center and a consultant to the city of Concord told businessmen that there's no reason why Contra Costa cities can't attract small to medium-sized conventions.

The convention and tourism business is an industry that so far has been overlooked by most cities in the county.

"It's an industry you really haven't tapped," he declared.

Lonnie Mathis, an analyst for the state Department of Finance, predicted Contra Costa will follow the rest of the state in growth.

And while that growth won't be as sharp as it was last year, it will be respectable.

Mathis foresees a decrease in the amount of sales tax revenues the county will receive. And while that forecast is statewide, he said Contra Costa could get less than its share because it may be selling less fuel oil from its refineries than it did during the past few energy crunch years. That would mean less dollars for the coffers of government, he said.

County stalls action on AC tax cutoffs

OAKLAND — Whenever the AC Transit strike ends, Alameda County supervisors will consider backing Assemblyman Tom Bates' bill to cut off tax funds for the transit district.

Now, that might sound like it's too late, but supervisors agreed last week that in the heat of battle it's not a good idea to act on the Bates' bill.

But later they will pursue the theory of supporting legislation that would cut off tax revenues to any taxing jurisdiction which is saving funds because of a strike.

AC Transit has been saving big sums every day because it doesn't have to pay its striking drivers.

Julie on tv

Dear Editor:
I am 13 and go to Frederiksen Intermediate School. For a term paper I am doing "Television — Entertainment or Menace?" One of my questions was: "Does television teach children?" All I could find out was that it didn't teach children.
Do you know of someone that says it teaches children? If so, please tell me so I could interview them.

Julie Nelson,
Dublin

Dear Julie:
There is little doubt that "television teaches children." The big question is, "Just what does it teach?"
We have learned, for instance, that children are urged, even forced through television commercials to eat all kinds of cereals and other "junk foods." We know also that certain toys are promoted on television that are harmful to children.

A lot of other things appear on television that can hurt you ... like shows that play up violence, teach you to how to hurt some one, sometimes making heroes out of bullies.

Is television therefore "a menace"? No more than a lot of other forms of entertainment, probably. Anything that we get too much of can be a menace ... and that includes candy or alcohol or fried foods or television.

The secret seems to be in knowing how much of anything we can handle, and then making ourselves stop right there. That is a problem faced by most children, and most adults.

The best answer for your question about television might come from your own classmates. Why don't you ask your teacher to set up a sort of class discussion on television? Let the students tell their own experiences, express their own doubts about the merits and the menace of televised entertainment.

You would probably learn a lot more on this subject from kids than you could from some adult. You see, grownups have their own problem with too much television and a lot of other things. Perhaps you and your classmates will come up with some answers that can help us parents.

Private schools

The interest throughout this Valley in "alternative education systems" is well documented. Most recently, that campign prompted the Oakland Diocese to sample Catholic families in parishes at Danville, Dublin, Pleasanton and Livermore on the possibility of broadening the parochial school program in those communities.

That interest is not confined to just this basin. A recent report in The San Francisco Examiner tells us that growth in private education is evident in six Bay Area counties. From just over 93,000 students enrolled in 415 schools in 1970, private schools grew by 1976 to over 100,000 students and 633 schools.

From yet another source (syndicated columnist Nick Thimmesch writing from the nation's capitol) we learn that "Nothing magic goes on in Catholic schools nor are they producing a generation of brilliant children."

But, the writer points out, Catholic Schools still enjoy widespread respect among most American families because "they look good by comparison" with public education. This "private school hype" is, in that one writer's opinion, tied to the belief that parochial education reflect more of "what learning was in the good old days ... discipline, homework and no nonsense."

True or not, it is an argument which convinces growing numbers of American parents to search out private education for their children. It is a message the multi - billion - dollar public school industry should be getting.

Radiation hazards

WASHINGTON — A Congressional sub committee begins hearings next week on the hazards of radiation exposure at Federal research sites.

The hearings are prompted in part by allegations of federal foot-dragging in the investigation of the possible link between leukemia and exposure to a Nevada test site shortly after a 1957 shot.

However — evidently as a result of that case — other radiation issues and other allegations of foot-dragging have also been publicized ... including the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory's Site 300 near Tracy.

Another involves the federal nuclear facility at Richland, Wash. Known as the Hanford site, this 570-square mile reservation employes twice as many people as the Livermore Laboratory and spends twice as many dollars. It produces and disposes of plutonium used in weapons, and it works on an advanced breeder reactor, among other things.

One charge is that the old Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA) pressured a researcher to refute the findings of a State of Washington 1974 report alleging a high number of cancer related deaths among Hanford employees.

Yet another case involves a pending law suit against the old Atomic Energy Commission charging that leukemia deaths resulted from exposure to a 1970 nuclear test known as Baneberry.

The hearings will be held by the interstate and foreign commerce subcommittee on health and the environment, chaired by Paul Rogers (Dem. — Fla.), the unofficial chief of medical issues in the House.

FOCUS/AC Transit strike

Pie-in-the-sky

Those AC Transit drivers who want their pie-in-the-sky and everything else not tied down accumulated 30,000 work day absences in 1976.

When divided by 1,450 drivers, that averages out to 20 sick leave days per employee. The 30,000 figure DOES NOT, according to AC, include the approximately 400 other members (clerks, maintenance, mechanics) of Amalgamated Transit Union Local 192.

This is the same Local that struck AC Transit back on Nov. 21 and has not been back to work since. A contract proposal endorsed by leadership of the Local was voted down 697 to 397 last Sunday.

Hope for a resumption of bus service in the Bay Area flickered over the weekend when maintenance personnel were allowed to go back into the yards to ready buses for possible service this past Monday.

Though negotiators for the Local and the company resumed talks Wednesday morning, those close to the scene were pessimistic over the chances of a revised contract proposal being shaped, presented and voted upon in the next few days.

Present base pay is $8.03 per hour. Part of the most recent management offer was a cost of living raise of 32 cents an hour, which would have raised the hourly figure to $8.35.

The number of days of sick leave, under the most recent change effective January of 1976, provides employees with 4 paid after one year of service, and 12 paid for two years and thereafter. Paid sick leave does not count days taken off for industrial accident care and family bereavement. Employees also get 10 paid holidays.

The number of days provided, the number actually taken, and what AC faces when absences mount up have been a part of the breach between labor and management in this case.

AC Transit states, when sick leave is high, they must call employees in who are on their day off. Those who come in are paid time - and - a -half or an additional $4 an hour, making base pay $12.03 an hour.

One unsubstantiated report last week said employees would receive approximately $19,000 in salary and $5,000 in benefits under terms of the proposal (that was voted down Sunday).

Speaking of the latest AC Transit offer, negotiator Robert Shamoon has been quoted as saying the $12 million package now on the table is all the district can put out.

From at least the union standpoint, this is debatable, though observers have the gut feeling that Shamoon is "up front" and not holding anything back now.

Efforts by city officials and legislators to shake the stalemate have been fruitless.

Which only goes to prove once-again that contemporary unions are an entity unto themselves.

Injunctions mean nothing (please refer to the county employees picketing of the Fairgrounds in Pleasanton in 1976) and the imploring of civic officials and legislators often fall on deaf ears.

It is the old "get-it-all-and-run" syndrome ... the taxpayers be damned ... and "gee, whiz, it's too bad senior citizens and the handicapped are deprived of bus service."

In some respects, it's too bad there isn't a countering philosophy still alive that would say, "Here's our final offer, we can give no more, accept it and go back to work or reject it and be out of a job.

Judging the judge

By George Nicholson and Tom Condit

When was the last time you cast an informed vote for the judge of your choice? If you can't recall, you are not alone.

Judges have long been subject to the scrutiny of the ballot box in California, presumably because Californians have never been comfortable with any branch of government exercising unfettered power. Yet, judging the judges remains no easy task.

Start by trying to see the public records of the criminal sentences any judge of your choice imposes in a given year. Go to the county clerk and ask, "I'd like to see the files in the criminal cases handled by Judge Juris B. Prudence in 1977."

"We don't file things that way," he will reply. Believe him, they don't.

All of us read about criminal cases which cause us wonderment, sometimes even bewilderment. We may even jot down a particular defendant's name. That won't help. Files aren't kept that way either.

Action numbers are the name of the game. Unless you know the action number of each particular criminal case that interests you, locating the files will be frustrating. As a result, these records have a way of not being very public unless you are in the know.

If you happen to come across the file you are looking for, don't be surprised to find that the probation report has been sealed. These reports contain most of the factual background judges rely on when they sentence criminal defendants.

Under Claifornia law, probation reports are sealed 30 days after criminal sentences are imposed. Ostensibly, this is done to protect convicts' privacy from public scrutiny.

Some legislators, a few judges and other public officials now question whether the administration of criminal justice should remain largely hidden from public view.

For example, Senator Newton R. Russell (R-Los Angeles), authored a bill in 1977 that would have required judges to state reasons for their decisions and required those reasons be transcribed and placed in the case file. That bill, SB 195, died in the Senate Judiciary Committee recently, but only after it sparked new debate on judicial accountability.

More recently, Assemblyman Alister McAlister (D-San Jose), introduced AB 2086, to require criminal sentences to be indexed by the names of the judges imposing those sentences.

In Southern California, last April, the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors voted to develop a program to make criminal sentencing information more accessible so as to help citizens decide more intelligently at election time which judges should remain on the bench.

The executive committee of the Los Angeles County Superior Court voted this January to seek development of a statewide plan aimed at making judge's criminal sentencing records public. This proposal was referred to the state Judicial Council and the California Judges Association. Its fate is uncertain.

Prosecutors tend to favor proposals that make anything judges do more visible. They do so because they suspect such proposals will cause some judges to act more responsibly in protecting the public.

Recently, Brent Barnhart, an American Civil Liberties Union spokesman joined proecutors in supporting Senator Russell's bill. Contrary to what seems to be the public's perception, Barnhart claims judges are acting responsibly and with greater visibility, he believes the public will come to recognize this.

So far, the Judges Association has opposed any such reform. The public may be interested to know whether they continue to do so. And, if so, Why?

Letters to the Times

Faulty School

Editor, The Times:
I think the problem of faulty facilities is a very serious one. I mean who wants to go to a school, and sit in class while water droplets fall on your head. Leaky water pipes are only one of the many problems at California High School. Halls that are too narrow, faulty lights, and poor acoustics and the music room are some of the other problems with which we are faced.

Since the halls are so small, it can sometimes be very difficult to get to class because so many people stop to talk, that a "people jam" seems to form right in the middle of the hall.

Faulty lights and poor acoustics are two of the problems that affect student's learning. Who wants to be reading or taking notes, and have the lights blinking on and off? How can anyone learn to play an instrument if they don't know what it's supposed to sound like?

I think that if the builder hadn't worked to complete the school, regardless of the finished product, then none of the above mentioned problems would have occurred.

Tax games

When running for governor in 1974 Jerry Brown repeatedly pledged there would be no new taxes and no increased taxes.

It was not too difficult a promise to make for his predecessor, Ronald Reagan, had signed increases in income and other taxes during his 8 years in office sufficient to finance a budget boost from $4 billion to $10 billion and still leave a surplus in the treasury when he turned the state over to Brown.

As time has proved those increases were far too much and the surplus has been growing in leaps and bounds now exceeding $3 billion despite the fact that Brown himself has increased the budget to $16.5 billion in just three short years.

The major factor in this enrichment of the state treasury has been inflation which has ben so rapid as to outdistance the prolific spending of the state officials.

There are tax experts who contend the very fact that income tax rates have not been adjusted for inflation, by the mechanism termed "indexing", is in itself a tax increase. That is based upon the fact that cost of living wage increases have resulted in the payment of higher income taxes by individuals while experiencing a diminishing of take-home pay.

Of special interest is how Brown has honored his pledge for no new or increased taxes during his first three years in office.

It will be remembered that Brown's first effort was to eliminate "loopholes" in taxation. This resulted in an increase of some $43 million in revenue by altering the oil depletion allowances, $23 million increase on the insurance industry by eliminating the home office exemptions, and $25 million increase in income taxes by imposing a minimum personal income tax. When questioned about these Brown said he meant there would be no new "general" taxes.

Since that time there have been other little bites such as the tax on all utility bills to finance the Energy Commission to the tune of $17 million, and a tax on telephone bills to finance the new 911 emergency system.

Then there was a $3.6 million increase in fees charged insurance companies, a 1 per cent increase in the takeout on horseracing at the fairs along with a 1 per cent increase in takeout on harness racing.

Also there was the elimination of interest to corporations on tax overpayments which saves the states $5 to $6 million a year in refunds, an additional $15 million revenues gained by altering income and other tax payments "to conform" with federal practices.

But the biggest bite of all was the increase by more than $600 million in taxes paid for unemployment insurance. Brown says those aren't taxes but "premiums."

And nothing could be more of a general tax than that levied on every employee to finance a $64 million increase in disability fund costs to extend payments to pregnancies.

round the town

Politicians will go to any lengths to serve the people.

The higher up the political ladder they are, the farther that elected servant will travel in pursuit of public service. Recently we saw Jimmy Carter go half way around the world (and half way back again, naturally) just to make America a better place for you and me.

Not to be outdone, our own Congressman Pete Stark ends (his friends call him "Fortney") travelled all the way to Hungary, so that he might better serve his constituents in Livermore, Oakland and places like that.

Now I know one of you is going to ask, "What has Congressman Pete's trip to Hungary got to do with his constituents in the East Bay?" A good question, and one we quickly passed on to Paul Repeat, the Congressman's local legislative assistant.

"Congressman Stark went to Hungary in order to return the Crown of St. Stephen to the people of Hungary," Paul Repeat explained. He noted also that "Mr. Stark was the leader of a distinguished panel of some 25 Americans who returned Stephen's crown to the communists now in charge of Budapest and with whom the American government is anxious to establish friendly relations, naturally."

Naturally. So now you understand why it was important to constituents of the Ninth Congressional District for Mr. Stark to travel to Hungary, at your expense.

This practice, you must understand, is deeply imbedded into the American system. I got this information from Deeply Imbedded, an authority on Global Travels by Our Representatives.

"It is one of those things that presidents and congressmen have been doing for a very long time," Deeply Imbedded explained.

Why?

"The reasons are traced to our founding fathers, who first ran back and forth to England trying to gain favors from the King for the American colonies," Imbedded said. "After that, our forefathers ran back and forth to France, seeking troops to help beat down the English, and still later the White House set up shuttle diplomacy with Ottawa to hammer out an end to the War of 1812."

So Henry Kissinger was not the inventor of "shuttle diplomacy" after all?

"Heavens no," Deeply Imbedded-explained. "America has been shuttling diplomats and messengers throughout its history. The only difference now is that Congress has finally gotten into the act."

Like sending Pete Stark to Hungary and Senator Baker to Panama?

"Yes, and Senator Kennedy was good enough to finance his own diplomatic mission to China, while Senator Hayakawa was firming up our relations with his relations in Japan."

We certainly appear to have a great many of our public servants travelling great distances just to advance the interest of Americans here at home, I suggested.

"Yes," Imbedded agreed, "and I think that Americans don't fully appreciate the lengths to which these dedicated servants of the people go to, just to make this a better place to live. Ten days in Budapest is not exactly a dream vacation after all, especially since this isn't really Hungary's season."

Yes, and Congressman Stark didn't complain one once about those hardships, or about the other stops he made in that 21-day swing through Europe, all in America's interests. Then there are those other dedicated members of Congress ... plodding through Paris, cruising around Cairo, fighting the flies in Fiji, scorched by sunshine in Santa Domingo.

"Yes, and don't forget bullied by bovines in Bombay," Deeply Imbedded added. "There are Americans in almost every country of the world today (chiefly south of the equator) enduring every hardship in order to serve their constituents."

But why do they do it? What makes a Congressman or a President leave the safe, comfortable confines of Washington in January and head for such distant hot spots as Trinidad or Tahiti?

"One thing you learn when you are committed to public service," Deeply Imbedded told me, "is that there is nothing like starting a little fire in some distant land, in order to get peoples' minds off the deep freeze here at home."

Dr. Joyce Brothers

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: I'm a 26-year-old woman in very good health, according to my doctor, but I can't seem to rid myself of this terrible fear of death. The fellow I go with tells me that religious people aren't afraid to die and that if I could become involved in a religious sect, I might be a much happier person. I come from a non-religious family. I don't have anything against religion, but it's just not a part of my life. Do you believe what my friend says about religion and fear of death is true? — S.O.

Dear S.O.: Recent studies indicate that almost everyone carries around some fear of death. Surprisingly, the extent of that fear has very little to do with age.

Psychologist Donald Templer discovered that older people do not tend to have a greater fear than the young, and that the fear doesn't vary with a person's health. He did find that high school students tended to have a fear of death comparable to those of their parents, especially the parent of the same sex. The closest of all score matches were found between husband and wife.

He concluded, as a result of this study, that there is something intrinsic to the nature of the more traditional Christian beliefs that allays fear of death, and the intensity of the belief seems important.

The person who is unusually fearful and preoccupied with death usually tends to be anxious and concerned about many things in life.

I believe if you became involved in some religious group, it might help you to focus some of your anxieties, to analyze and relieve them. It would also add structure to your life and help turn your anxiety away from yourself and onto others.

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: We have one large TV set in the family room and our four children think we're deprived because we won't oblige them by getting one or two for their rooms. Actually, they'd each like a small set, which I think is ridiculous. My mother-in-law has offered to get them each a set if we approve. I hate the idea and so does my husband. Do you think we're old-fashioned about this and depriving our children of an opportunity to grow and learn? — A.F.

Dear A.F.: No you're not. I agree with you and your husband. Of course, there are some educational as well as entertaining programs on television, it isn't all blood and gore, but these shows can be seen on the set you have in the family room. There's much to be said for group viewing. For one thing it helps to hold the family together.

Psychologist Dr. Herberty Hoffman, who studied 175 families, reported that the more TV sets operating in a home, the less harmonious and communicative a family tends to be. Families with more than two sets don't work well together. Each member tends to have his own projects and interests and is physically and emotionally isolated from the others. Conversations revolve around events rather than feelings or personal problems. Families with one set are more aware of each other's feelings.

When a set is in a family room, parents still can maintain the needed control over what their children select. In addition, if a program is frightening to a younger child, the very fact that others are in the room helps to Put the program in perspective and makes it less disturbing and psychologically damaging to the child.

Studies show that familieis with the highest rate of tension watch the most TV, in order to avoid conflicts among themselves. In crowded families, a high level of viewing appears an acceptable way of avoiding unpleasant domestic situations.

I'd suggest you stick to your guns.

Three thick layers of material—the crust, the mantle, and the core—lie under the earth's thin surface.

The outermost layer of the earth is a crust of rock. It may be only a few miles thick under the oceans. But is is some 35 miles deep beneath the continents.

Next comes the 1,800-mile-deep layer of solid rock called the mantle. Below the mantle the earth's core extends inward the final 2,200 miles.

Liquid on the outside, the center of the core is a solid ball of iron and nickel which forms the very center of the earth itself. The super-hot core seethes at temperatures that may reach 7,500 degrees F.

Probably we will never get to look at the earth's center. The chance that man can ever drill more than a few miles deep into the earth is very small.

But scientists learn much about the insides of the earth by studying volcanoes and earthquakes.

Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — In one of your columns you described the effects of DES on male children. My husband is one such case. Although he is not completely sterile his sperm count is only 4,500,000. We are unable to conceive. Can this effect of DES be reversed? Is there hormonal therapy that can correct this dysfunction? We would appreciate your advice concerning this matter.

DEAR READER — DES (diethylstilbesterol) is a synthetic substitute for estrogen and it was once widely used to prevent miscarriages in women who had histories of miscarriages or a threatened abortion. The spotlight has been on its effect on the daughters of women who used DES. As I mentioned in my earlier column there is evidence that it may also have affected some of the sons by affecting sexual development and more often affecting sperm production. It is certainly true that low sperm counts and infertility can result in a man whose mother took DES to preserve her pregnancy.

However, that does not prove that this caused your husband's low sperm count. There are lots of men who have low sperm counts whose mothers never went near DES during pregnancy. The normal count is 60 to 150 million sperm cells per milliliter (there are about 3.5 milliliters per teaspoon).

There are some things that can be done in selected cases to improve a man's fertility which may help in your husband's case. It is important to have had an evaluation to be sure there are no hormonal deficiencies that can be corrected. Some men have higher counts when they are placed on thyroid supplements. Recently there has been some success reported in using the fertility pill that women use, to increase sperm production in men. The same hormones from the pituitar gland that stimulate the ovary in the woman stimulate the testicles in the man. Using this principle the fertility pills were tried and found to work in some cases.

Another technique that has helped in some cases is the use of pooled specimens. A large number of sperm cells can be collected in several specimens and artificial insemination used.

Vulnerable: East-West, Dealer: South, Opening lead: King of diamonds.

West	North	East	South
			1♥
Double	4♥	Pass	Pass
Double	Pass	Pass	Pass

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

We are showing the same hand as yesterday except that we have shifted the direction to make South the declarer.

The bidding is the same except that in yesterday's article the player with the East cards elected to bid four spades. This time we find that he has passed the four-heart double.

West opens the king of diamonds and his partner drops the deuce. What should West lead at trick two?

He should lead one of his low diamonds.

There is a common sense, simple convention in this situation.

When your partner leads the king against a suit contract and you have two cards in the suit you automatically play the higher one unless it is the queen.

The deuce cannot be the higher of the two cards. Hence it is either a singleton; or it shows queen-deuce or queen and two small.

The low lead cannot hurt with any of those possibilities.

Valley Employment and Training Program is designed to serve qualified unemployed, underemployed and low-income residents of the Valley.

A training program for adults is already underway.

According to Scott Heston, program coordinator, there are three ways in which this program can improve the individual's job readiness skills and income potential: High school equivalency preparation (possibly involving basic skills remediation); career skills development; and classroom training in high-demand job categories.

"We have excellent cooperation from Chabot College, Livermore schools and the Regional Occupational Program in providing the best training," Heston. In the first phase, participants who need it are assisted with acquistion of a high school diploma (or its equivalent through examination). On an individual basis, each participant is given help with needed basic skills, partly to enable him to take employment tests.

In addition, participants are provided with job interview techniques, development of personal skills such as decisionmaking. Tests are available to help participants determine which direction to take in terms of job choice and training.

Harvest Park on TV

Cablevision Channel 12 here in the Valley will broadcast excerpts from the Harvest Park School Authors Program of last year this morning and Monday and Tuesday of next week at 9:30.

The 1978 program will commence with the annual luncheon Wednesday at 11:30 a.m. Author Marilyn Sachs will be the guest speaker.

Workshop at Disney

SAN RAMON— Teachers, Early Childhood Education para-professionals and parents at Walt Disney School held a participatory psycho-motor workshop Thursday at the school.

Montevideo teachers Joe Bagan and Mike Alteri demonstrated all the techniques of psycho-motor skills, including the use of gymnastics.

The workshop was organized by Bonnie Solberg, Walt Disney principal, and Sharon Rachael.

Solar workshop at Chabot

Supported by a grant from the prestigious National Science Foundation, Chabot College-Valley Campus will host five free solar energy workshops for students and members of the community starting Saturday, Jan. 28.

The workshops are to be led by experts who will describe their information in non-technical terminology. All sides of the issue will be discussed, bringing together both the pros and cons of using solar energy as an alternate energy source. The workshops will encourage participation by those who attend.

Project directors are Dr. Barbara Mertes, dean of Chabot-Valley Campus, and Arthur Deleray, chemistry instructor. Aided by Gabrielle Meeker, a biochemist will serve as conference director, the trio will be joined by a citizens' advisory committee in designing the thrust and direction of the five workshops.

Dr. Donald Aitken of San Jose State University will be featured at the workshop on the 28th. The workshop commences at 9 a.m. and will focus on the general aspects of solar energy. Displays of solar energy devices will be available for viewing by the public.

Part of the workshop will be dedicated to the planning of the structure for the future workshops to be given during the winter quarter on the Valley Campus site, located at 3033 Collier Canyon Rd., Livermore.

The second workshop, pcheduled for Saturday, Feb. 25, at 9 a.m., entitled "Solar Energy and You," will speak to the utilization of solar energy in the home and in small businesses, and the making of plans for solar installations. Directing this program will be Dr. William Seavy, director, Solar Energy Program, P.G.&E.

The third workshop, scheduled for Saturday, March 4 at 9 a.m., is entitled "Building for the Future." It will be led by Dale Sartor, an architect specializing in interactive resources. This workshop will speak directly to the concerns of architects, contractors, and members of the construction trade.

The fourth workshop, slated Saturday, March 11, is entitled "Getting Your Solar Installation," and will direct its concerns toward finalizing plans, getting approval and financing, and developing construction skills. The speaker will be Bob Pelikan, producing engineer manager, Alten Associates.

The final workshop, "Informing the Electorate," also set to begin at 9 a.m., will speak to the influence of local government in the usage of building codes and permits; this workshop will be held Saturday, March 18. Featured is the science advisor to the City of Santa Clara, Nick Davis, an engineer and a recognized consultant in alternate energy applications.

All costs for the workshops are funded by the National Science Foundation, Chabot College and Lawrence Livermore Laboratory.

Chabot travelogue

Two of Central America's most colorful regions will be featured when Ralph Gerstle personally narrates his color documentary film "Guatemala" and "The Yucatan, Land of the Maya," Tuesday, Jan. 31 at Chabot College Valley Campus. The film will be shown in Room 601 at 7:30 p.m. on the 31st. The films deal with Guatemala's urban life, its archealogy, the life of the surviving Mayan Indians and the vistas of flat terrain and miles of scrub jungle in the Yucatan. There is no charge for admission to the showing at Chabot Valley Campus.

No review of aid bill

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The California Supreme Court refused Thursday to rule on the validity of a new $4.3 billion school aid bill aimed at eliminating district funding disparaties.

It denied without prejudice the petition for a writ of mandamus sought by John Serrano Jr. and others who have battled for a number of years to eliminate the financial inequality among the state's some 1,000 school districts.

The petitioners had requested a declaration by the high court that despite recent legislation, California's school financing system remains unconstitutional. They also sought "appropriate orders" directed to various officials to ensure that there would be constitutional school financing by the 1980-81 school year as ordered by the court in the now-famed Serrano-Priest decisions.

Crosby officials look to weatherman

PEBBLE BEACH — Officials adopted a "wait and see" attitude, with little confidence or optimism, after heavy rains washed out the first round of the $225,000 Bing Crosby National Pro-Am Golf Tournament Thursday.

The tournament schedule has been pushed back one day and now is scheduled to end Monday — weather permitting.

Another rain storm off the Pacific is expected to hit the drenched and partially-flooded Monterey Peninsula Sunday or Monday.

"We just have to play it one day at a time — just wait and see what happens," said Jack Tuthill, the veteran Tournament Director for the PGA Tour and the man in charge of the day-to-day operations of the tour.

Barring more rain, "there's a good chance" the first round will be played Friday, Tuthill said.

Due to the unusual format — pros play one round with celebrity amateurs on each of three courses before the final round at Pebble Beach — it is impossible to play double rounds in this event. The contract between the sponsors and the tour specifies that the tournament can run as late as Tuesday.

The tournament, often subjected to wind, rain and cold, was limited to 54 holes in 1974.

It is played over Pebble Beach, Cypress Point and Spyglass Hill courses.

The area, saturated with three weeks of almost-uninterrupted storms, received about 1 inches of rain during the night. The courses were inundated. Greens, tees, fairways and bunkers were flooded.

ABC-TV announced it would extend its scheduled national television coverage from two days to three — Saturday, Sunday and Monday. Exact times of the Monday telecast were uncertain.

Stay undefeated

AV matmen win thriller

In a wild match that featured more warnings than a report on smoking by the Surgeon General, the Amador Valley Dons upended Livermore High School, 30-18 in crucial East Bay Athletic League wrestling action last night.

The visiting Dons remained undefeated in league at 4-0 while the Cowboys dropped to 3-1. Amador Valley led by as much as 13 at 19-6 but it took a 5-3 decision in the 191-pound division by Chuck Gandon and a heavyweight pin by Ernie Zumbach to seal the victory.

"This establishes us as the best in the league," said Amador Valley coach Ron Blanton. "The kids deserved it."

Prehaps Blanton's biggest strategic move of the night was moving Mitch Heradia from the 145 to 154-pound division.

At 145 pounds Livermore's Naish Piazza pinned Lloyd Chapman. Heradia followed by defeating Tood Berg 6-1 to up Amador Valley's lead to 22-12 at that point.

"Mitch and Piazza would have been a toss-up," explained Blanton. "I knew he (Heradia) would win at 154. It worked out well for us."

Blanton noted that it was a "very aggressive match".

"They were very physical but so were we."

In the 103's Robert Baird and Chris Heradia got into a wild 5-5 tie. Baird was penalized in the match for a full nelson and, in the matches' last seconds Heradia threw some rapid-fire kicks that fortunately eluded Baird.

In the 138-pound division Mike Larson of Amador Valley was ahead of Frank Brown 4-0 when Brown unleashed a right hook that landed on Chapman's face. Dazed, Larson returned to win 8-2.

In an attempt to add injury to his own insult Brown attempted a match-concluding kick to Larson's mid-section.

Despite these apparent outtakes from Rocky (the movie) there were some graceful matches.

Mike Draper of Livermore fell behind 4-1 to Tim Monday late in the third round but rebounded for a frantic 6-5 victory.

With Livermore trailing 22-15 Mike Miller of Amador Valley faced a pin-situation which would have given the Dons only a one-point lead but his desperate efforts to elude the fall paid off as he lost 10-2 to Dale Hanson.

Gandon and Zumbach followed with victories providing the for EBAL superiority.

Mathews in Hall of Fame

NEW YORK — Slugger Eddie Mathews, the rare combination of an infielder who could hit with power, was elected to the Hall of Fame Thursday by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Mathews was named on 301 of the 379 ballots cast, well beyond the 285 or 75 percent required for election. Enos Slaughter finished second with 261, followed by Duke Snider with 254, the late Gil Hodges with 226 and Don Drysdale with 219. No other player received more than 200 votes.

A year ago, Mathews finished second in the BBWAA voting, trailing Ernie Banks, the only player elected by the writers in 1977. The irony of that vote was that Banks, a shortstop-first baseman, and Mathews, who played third base, both hit 512 career home runs, tied for ninth place on the all-time list.

"Ernie once told me we were the only infielders to hit more than 500 homers, too," said Mathews, who batted .271 in 17 seasons with the Braves, Houston Astros and Detroit Tigers. He was elected in his fifth year of eligibility but the delay hardly disturbed him. "I'd have waited 10 years if I had to," he said "This is the most exciting day of my life."

Mathews said he was let down last year when he fell short. "I anticipated it last year and I was disappointed when I missed," he said. "This year I fought it. I guess it was reverse psychology. I didn't want to get my hopes up again."

But Mathews, who was planning to come East this week anyway, moved his trip to New York up a day on the chance that the ballot count might go his way. When it did, he became only the fifth third baseman elected to the Cooperstown, N.Y. shrine. The others were Home Run Baker, Jimmy Collins and Fred Lindstrom, all elected by the Veterans' Committee, and Pie Traynor, who was enshrined by the writers.

"Maybe it's a tougher position," Mathews said. "Third basemen get cut a lot and suffer injuries that outfielders might not get. I also think there's also moretension involved in playing the infield."

Mathews came up with the Boston Braves in 1952 and moved with the club to Milwaukee the Next year. There he was joined by another young slugger, Hank Aaron. Together, they hit more home runs than any other teammates.

"At the start, Hank wasn't the home run hitter he ended up to be," said Mathews. "I was two years ahead of him but we were both starry-eyed kids. Later it became a friendly rivalry. It wasn't that we tried to hit home runs because I don't think you can. But we were in our own little competition."

With Aaron swinging from the right side and Mathews from the left, the Braves became a power-laden club and won National League championships in 1957 and 1958. Later, Mathews became manager of the Braves in Atlanta and was the club's pilot in 1974 when Aaron broke Babe Ruth's all-time home run mark. "That was one of my greatest thrills," said Mathews.

Another was his election to the Hall of Fame. "I don't think it's set in yet," he said. "I know it's happened. I'm excited. But it's like getting your nose broken. I'm still in shock."

Girls' cage

Fouls stop 'Pokes in AV win

When half of your bench fouls out and the other half equals four, your in trouble.

The Livermore High School girls' basketball team can attest to that. Despite an overly aggressive defensive effort by the 'Pokes, they lost to the still-undefeated Amador Valley Dons, 57-44 at the winners' gym last night in East Bay Athletic League competition.

The Dons' league record is 5-0 while Livermore's mark is 3-2.

The leading scorer for the victors was center Sheryl Withoft with 16 markers. She was the game's high scorer. Lee Hardimann was the top scorer for the Cowgirls as she dumped in 15 points.

The 'Pokes led off the second quarter with a shooting spree. Lee Hardiman took the tip-off and drove past three Don defenders to start Livermore's rally with a turnaround jumper that was good for two.

The Cowgirls began to move the ball down the court confidently, avoiding the costly turnovers that hurt them in the first quarter.

On one of many fast breaks, Diane Leri hit one from the top of the key for the Pokes.

Although Livermore's style and shooting improved, so did the teams' aggressiveness.

Both squads were plagued by fouls, but four straight times, under their own hoop, the Cowgirls were called for violations.

They kept the Dons busy under their own board too, but also sent Jayn Kuhns and Marian Hagler to the line to give Amador Valley four freebies late in the quarter.

Hagler, playing her usual style of tough defense, sent the 'Pokes' April Way to the line also. Way dropped two through the hoop, as the Cowgirls continued to play catch-up with the frustated Dons.

Jamie Watson, prehaps Amador Valley's most energetic defender, picked up her second foul as she sent Leri to the line for another two points.

On a jump ball, the next play, Watson took the tip, found all lanes open and unblocked, and fastbroke her way down the court for a diving in.

The Dons went on a scoring rampage in the last minute of the half, with Carolyn Hill and Juhns putting the squad 10 points ahead to lead off the third quarter.

Livermore attempted to play catchup in the third and fourth quarters the hard way. The last two minutes of the game saw the 'Pokes bench getting crowded as the amount of women on the floor dwindled due to fouls. The Cowgirls' efforts were all for naught.

Allen bitter over firing

WASHINGTON — A bitter George Allen, fired abruptly as coach and general manager of the Washington Redskins by team President Edward Bennett Williams, bid farewell to his assistants Thursday after viciously criticizing the man who released him.

As the Redskins began a search for a successor to the most successful coach in Washington history, Allen called Williams "devious, deceitful and a Jekyll and Hyde."

Allen attended the funeral of Redskins controller Chester Minter, who died Sunday, on Thursday morning and then went to Redskins Park, the magnificent plant he created near Dulles International Airport, to talk with his assistant coaches, several of whom are being mentioned as taking over the reins of the Redskins.

Williams said again that he was convinced Allen was negotiating with the Los Angeles Rams even though Allen had agreed, but had not signed, a four-year extension of his contract calling for a reported $250,000 a year.

"I believed we had an agreement in July," said Williams. "We had agreed to all terms. I then sought to get a signed contract and did not get one.

"I finally told him that the club was being seriously prejudiced by the paralysis it was in from not knowing where we were going next year," Williams continued. "I had exhaustive meetings with him in the last 10 days and I told him I would have to start talking to someone else if we couldn't come to an agreement by last Saturday. I never received a call from him. I called him on Monday and told him I couldn't wait any longer.

Allen denied he had talked to the Rams, although he said he would only consider jobs in Washington and Los Angeles, where he was head coach before coming to the nation's capital in 1971.

"I always thought this would be my last coaching job," said Allen. "To say that I've been thinking about going to the Rams is untrue and inaccurate. I don't have any job with the Rams. My first choice has always been the Redskins."

Williams said he would seek "the best coach I can get" to replace Allen, splitting the duties of head coach and general manager between two men.

Members of the current Redskins' staff likely to be interviewed include defensive coordinator "Torgy" Torgeson, plus offensive coordinator Charlie Waller and defensive backfield coach Ralph Hawkins.

Jack Pardee, who resigned Thursday as coach of the Chicago Bears, will seek the coaching job with the Skins, according to the Bears. Pardee is a former Redskin player and assistant coach.

Ara Paraseghian, the former Notre Dame coach and now a television commentator, also is rumored as a candidate for the job.

In his seven years here, Allen's record was 67-30-1, the best in the club's history. The team won the NFC championship in 1972, Allen's second year, and went to the Super Bowl, losing to Miami 14-7.

Mats win, take lead

There's nothing like a little game practice to get a team ready for its big match of the season and Granada High School's soccer team proved it was ready yesterday.

The Matadors swept by Monte Vista 6-0 in Livermore to move their record to 6-0-2, one point ahead of Dublin, the team they meet today in the East Bay Athletic League race.

Robbie Jamieson scored three times for the Matadors and Steve Childs added two.

Granada now has 14 points to 13 for the Gaels. The Matador-Dublin match will be played on the Gaels' field at 3 p.m.

Other EBAL matches today have third-place Amador Valley meeting California on the latters' field, Monte Vista at Foothill and San Ramon hosting Livermore.

Amador Valley (4-1-1 and winner of the Ballistic United Amador Valley Tournament during the hollidays) is five points behind the Matadors but has played two less games. Dublin is 6-0-1 and Foothill 4-2. Neither the Dons or Foothill have played since Christmas vacation.

Livermore with a 4-4 record, will be hard-pressed to make the EBAL playoffs. The Cowboys have played two more contests than Foothill but also have two more losses.

However, the 'Pokes played one of their best games of the season in a narrow 2-1 loss to Granada Wednesday and could be tough the rest of the way.

San Ramon, with a winless 0-6 mark and 36 goals scored on them is a perfect chance for the Cowboys to move up in the standings.

Foothill should have little trouble with Monte Vista. The Falcons have one of the league's best goalies in Dave Konecny and also have some fine fullbacks.

Raider assistant goes to Montreal

OAKLAND — Joe Scannella, special teams coach for the Oakland Raiders the past six seasons, Thursday accepted the head coaching position of the Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League.

Scannella, who makes his home in Danville, is the second assistant to leave John Madden's staff in the past week.

Earlier the Raiders had fired linebacker coach Don Shinnick.

Scannella, 47, was an offensive coach for the Alouettes in 1969.

Joe had served as head football coach at the University of Vermont in the two seasons prior to joining Montreal in 1969.

A rainbow with no color

SAN MATEO — With all the crazy weather of recent days, Bay Meadows is claiming it leads the nation's race tracks in rainbows. There were 13 of the multi-colored sky arcs counted last Tuesday between rain squalls and four more yesterday morning.

One track executive excitedly called photographer Doug Murchison, instructing him to run out and capture a picture pf one of the rainbows.

"How do you take a picture of a rainbow with black and whie film? asked Murchison.

Double Dickey back in form

OAKLAND — Derrek Dickey of the Golden State Warriors says he hasn't returned to top physical form, but don't tell that to the Washington Bullets.

And don't advise his team mates, who hope Dickey's just fine and ready to contribute to the Warriors rediscovered "team" game, as they prepare to host the Phoenix Suns tonight at 8 p.m.

Dickey's 18 points, his season high, including a crucial field goal during an eight-point spurt in the final minutes, paced the Warriors to a 113-106 National Basketball Association victory Wednesday.

"I'm still not 100 percent, only about 80 percent," said Dickey, who has been plagued by a chronic ankle injury this season. "The ankle is still pretty sore."

"It was Double's best game of the year, both ways," said Warriors Coach Al Attles, whose club won its fifth game in their seven outings. "He was a big help on defense."

Attles, who has seen his team struggle to a 20-22 record, said the victory against the division leading Bullets would be a boost to the team's morale.

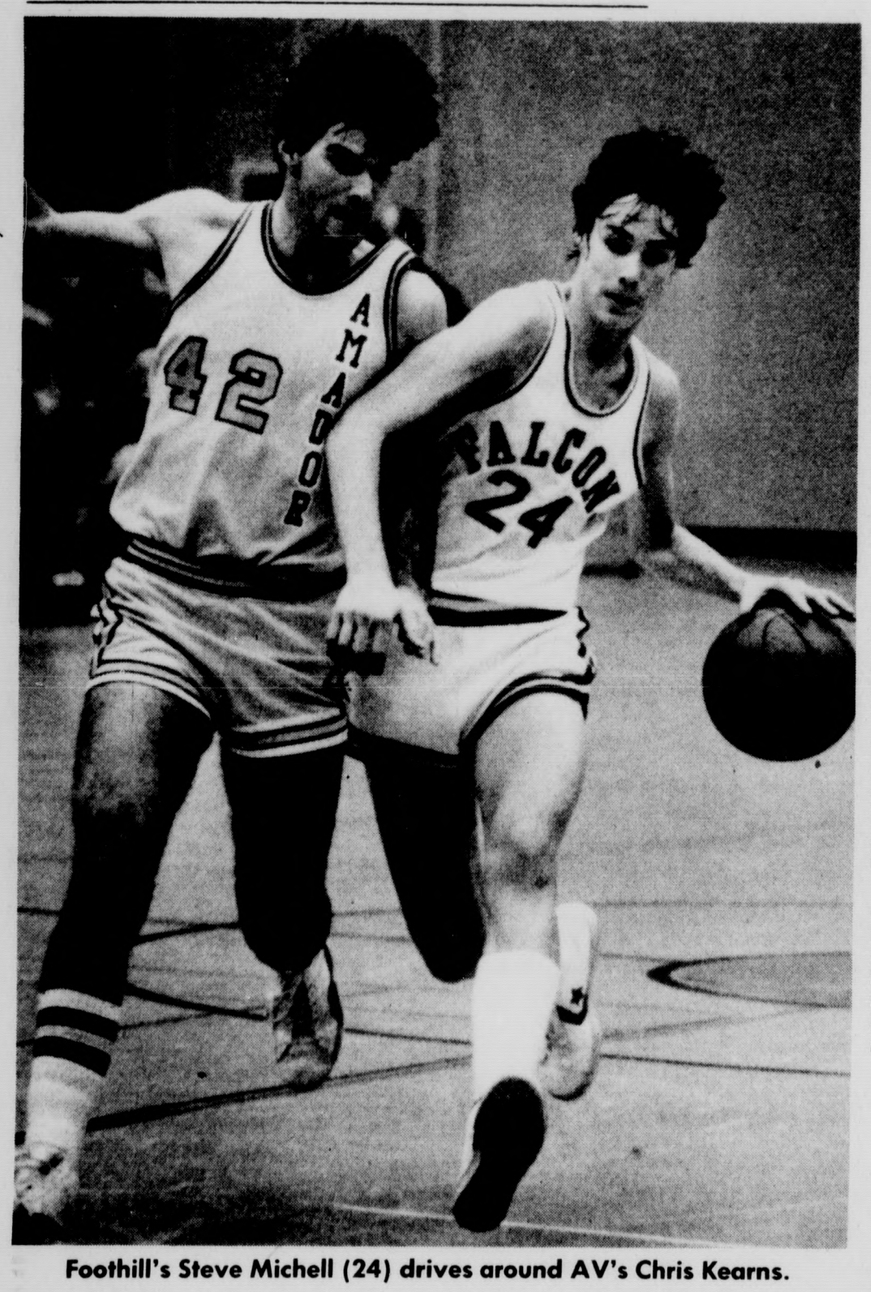
"A win is a win, but when you play well against a division winner, it gives you extra confidence," Attles said. "We made the big plays when we had to."

Coach Dick Motta of the Bullets said the turning point came midway through the first period when starting guard Tom Henderson was forced to leave with a sprained ankle.

"That really hurt," said Motta. "We made a comeback in the last quarter (cutting the Warrior lead to 103-102 with 2:35 remaining), but then the air went out of us."

After the Bullets had erased a 12-point Golden State lead, the Warriors scored eight straight points to go ahead 111- 102 with 1:08 left. The points game on two free throws each by Charles Dudley, Phil Smith and Clifford Ray and Dickey's field goal.

Phil Smith had 28 points to lead the Warriors, while Rick Barry added 19. Forward Bob Dandridge led the Bullets with 27 points, while Elvin Hayes had 23 and Kevin Grevey 22.



Foothill's Steve Michell (24) drives around AV's Chris Kearns.

Don, Pokes met tonight

Gael, Falcon cagers impress

With a little stroke of chance one way or another, the East Bay Athletic League basketball season could end up as one of the wildest chases ever.

Teams continue to buck the odds, as evidenced by surprising results of Wednesday night's games.

Dublin High took off on their best shooting spree of the season, downing Granada 81-67 to vault themselves right back into the playoff picture.

Foothill momentarily forgot its 0-4 league record and gave defending champion Amador Valley one of their toughest bouts of the season before falling, 53-51.

Livermore played their finest game since the league season began and retained a share of first place with a somewhat surprisingly easy 68-54 walk over California.

Monte Vista High didn't care about playing away from home in their arch - rival's gym, putting away San Ramon 55-46 with a sterling defensive effort to also remain tied for the top spot.

Tonight's schedule will have all eyes on Pleasanton, as Livermore (4-1) and Amador Valley (4-1) meet in the Dons' gym.

Since the top four teams will again go to the post - season playoffs this year, each of the other three games are of an equal importance, if not magnitude. Dublin (2-3) and California (2-3) mix it up in San Ramon, San Ramon (2-3) and Granada (2-3) meet in Livermore, while Foothill (0-5) and Monte Vista (4-1) tangle in Danville in what may result in the Falcons' first win, judging from their performance Wednesday against Amador, a team which lost to Monte Vitsa by one point.

While a definite upper and lower division is forming in the EBAL thus far, the teams which are now 2-3 and fighting for the final playoff spot seem have all the capabilities of beating either Amador, Livermore or Monte Vista. Granada, in fact, has beaten both the 'Pokes and Mustangs. No team has as untouchable.

The current three - way tie, barring an Act of God, will be dissolved after Friday when the Cowboys and Dons go at it.

Livermore coach John Erceg, commenting on the game, believes his 'Pokes are up to the task. "I have my secret worries and secret plays," he admitted, "but what bothers me most are the matchups. I think we played good on defense and were more patient on offense (against Cal), and we'll obviously have to do the same against Amador."

Livermore is smaller than the Dons, who have returning front - liners Rick Howard, Chris Kearns and Ken Noble playing well thus far this year.

However, the 'Pokes have shown the ability to run against anybody, killing the Grizzlies with it in the first half Wednesday by jumping out to a 37-17 lead at halftime and 55-28 after three quarters.

Guards John Farfan and Jim Rogers lead the charges, but center Brian Schweiger moves down the court well, too, as evidenced by an 11-point first quarter performance, many of which came on follow - ins after missed fast - break lay - ins. Schweiger led all scorers with 20 points.

Amador coach Skip Mohatt, well aware of the Cowboys' annual running attack, has been very successful in stunting the run - and - gun attack with the Dons' own patient style of rugged, man - to - man defense and methodical offense.

Granada returns to its home gym to play San Ramon. The Mats have given up 153 points in two games, a telling figure when looking at their two - game loss streak. The Wolves have been OK on defense, but haven't competed well at the boards with their small, quick style of offense. SR has lost three games in succession after opening up the year with a pair of wins.

California will hope to get more from the individuals which paved the way for a win over Granada when they meet the upstart Gaels. Mark Kulak and Daryl Lamb, who combined for 33 points against the Mats, scored just 15 between them against Livermore. The Gaels will rely on the shooting of Jeff Barnes and the rebounding power of Marcus Reese. The Gaels have a deep bench and plenty of heighth, as evidenced in their 81 - point effort against Granada. Given the opportunity, Dublin will run with frequency, and Cal has trouble with running teams this year.

Foothill, by no means as bad as their 0-5 record indicates, tries and shakes things up a little more in an interesting contest with Monte Vista. Both teams have been hurt by the press this year, but the 'Stangs have recovered via the shooting for the EBAL's leading scorer, Randy Woods. Ray Bluth and Jack O'Neal each scored 14 points against San Ramon and add to the Mustang shooters.

Asberry, Beal Flecto winners

Michael Asberry of Pittsburg and Robbie Beal of Bishop O'Dowd are this weeks' winners of the Flecto Award for Contra Costa and Alameda countys respectively.

Asberry, a 6-foot-3 forward led the Pirates to three wins last week. hitting 26 baskets in 31 attempts from the floor. Pitt topped Northgate, College Park and Clayton Valley. The Pirates are in first place in the Diablo Valley Athletic League.

Beal, another 6-foot-3 forward, scored 26 points and made 12 of 14 baskets as O'Dowd topped St. Joseph's by 26 points in a Catholic League contest. In a 49-47 win over Moreau High School Beal sank 13 of 16 shots and made 27 points. He is one of the reasons O'Dowd is in first place in the CAL.

Dave Meister of Mills is the San Mateo County winner and Rozlen Saunders of Lincoln in the San Francisco winner.

Meister, a 5-foot-11 junior, scored 23 points in his first start as Mills topped previously undefeated Aragon 60-58. It was Mill's first league win in the Mid-Penninsula League.

Rozlen, a 5-foot-1 junior, scored 34 points to lead Lincoln past Lowell 47-43 in girls' basketball action. She only weighs 80 pounds.

Moran high in ratings

Suzette Moran took five firsts in the 1977 Pacific Association swimming competition.

Moran, who swims for the Pleasanton Swim Team, was first in the girls' nine-10 100-butterfly (1:14.50), 50-butterfly, 33.27; 50-breaststroke, 36.00, and 100-breaststroke, 1:27.62.

Jackie LaBreck also did well in the nine-10 group, finishing seventh in the 100-butterfly, 1:19.32; eighth in the 100-backstroke, 1:22.70 and ninth in the 100-backstroke, 1:15.44.

In a recent Piedmont meet Leslie LaBreck was a standout in the eight-and-under girls' competition, taking a first in the 50-butterfly with a 51.4 clocking. She also took third in the 50-braststroke and fourth in the 100-I.M.

In Boys' 15-18 action Tom Wilson was first in three events. He won the 100-yard freestyle in 52.3 (AA time); the 200-yard free in 1:53.8 and the 200-yard breaststroke in 2:32.1. He was also fourth in the 200-yard backstroke with a 2:21.5 clocking.

In boys' 10-and-under action Craig Dolley was first in the 100-yard butterfly, 200-yard individual medley, 50-yard butterfly and 50-yard backstroke. His 50-yard backstroke time was 36.0, an "AA" clocking. He was also third in thr 50-yard breaststroke and second in the 50-yard freestyle. Mario Pagaliuagan was third in the 100-yard butterfly and sixth in the 200-yard individual medley in the same age bracket.

In boys' 11-12 action Joe Lara recorded a non-placing AA time of 1:09.8 in the 100-yard individual medley. He also finished second in the 200-yard individual medley and was sixth in both the 50-yard breaststroke and 50-yard freestyle.

Keith leads Glads against hot Canada

Chabot College hosts Canada tomorrow night in an important game for both Goldn Gate Conference basketball clubs.

Game time is 7:30 p.m.

The Gladiators, sparked by 6-foot-6 sophomore Brian Keith, are 2-3 in lague aftr a loss to Foothill Wednesday.

Canada, 4-1 in the GGC, are battling San Jose City College for the conference leadership.

Chabot coach Jon Wagoner will go with his usual starting line-up of Phil Ybarra and Keith at forwards, Willie Hardeman at center, and Steve Fraga and Gene Andrews at the guard spots.

Keith is top scorer for the Glads, averagin 19 points a game. His 13.1 rebounds per contest rank him third in the state.

"We size up about even in heighth," said Wagoner. "But they might be a little quicker."

Wagoner was asked if Canada will provide one of Chabot's stiffer tests this season.

"I don't think we have an easy game all season," he said. "Our league is very balanced."

Duey sparks Pools victory

Leland Duey canned 12 points to lead American Pools past First National Bank 48-45 in Tri-Valley Recreation "C" men's basketball action recently.

The winners jumped off to a 26-16 lead in the first half and went on from there. Kirk Keller led the losers with 22 markers.

Has Beens took an easy 46-35 decision over American Sports. Jim Mann had 14 points and Lloyd Block 11 for the winners. Steve Wisner had 11 points and David Diaz 10 for American Sports but only two other players scored for the losers.

'Great...but not great-great'

Freeman Williams: D his key to NBA?

MORAGA — Only 16 seconds remained in regulation play. Portland State was up by two and the smooth senior from Los Angeles steadied himself on the foul line.

The crowd noise was near deafening. The first shot missed badly. The second also failed.

To the ecstatic 1400 fans at St. Mary's antiquated gym, it was as though Mighty Csey had struck out.

Freeman Williams, the NCAA's defending scoring champion, somehow blew two free throws and, in the process, help seal the Vikings' fate in an overtime 99-97 loss to the Gaels Wednesday night.

But "Free," as his admiring teammates call him, had done little wrong in his brilliant career with the previously publicity-starved Vikings. In fact, he has done for the PSU basketball program what Bill Walton has done for the pro Portland franchise — put them on the map.

"Freeman Williams took us from a Division II team to a Division I team," declared Portland State head coach Ken Edwards.

A lithe 6-foot-4 guard, Williams entered the St. Mary's contest with a 32.2 per game scoring average, good for third in the country. Against the Gaels? Well, he recovered from a 6-for-17 first half and buried 18 of 35 game attempts in streaking to a 48-point performance.

Williams' scoring outburst broke a St. Mary's gymn record which will never be broken, since the Gaels move into a nw complex Saturday against Stanford.

Stretched out on a trainer's table before his typically incredible performance, Williams spoke softly, almost inaudibly.

Despite his 28 point per game average in high school, Williams said he only received "a few scholarship offers," and he narrowed it down to the University of Southern California or PSU. "One of the main reasons I came to Portland is because the assistant coach (Moe Adolph) went to my high school," said Williams in what must be considered one of the recruiting coups of the last several years.

Williams has already shown his importance to the program. Not only is he a legend in the fans' view, but is highly respected by his teammates.

Bill Mathis, a 6-foot-5 freshman from Los Angeles, said he came to Portland because "It's a good school and I'd get the chance to play on the same team with Freeman."

Edwards summed up Williams' importance best.

"When I used to go recruiting they'd ask 'Who is Portland State.' They don't ask ."

How does the opposition feel about the scoring machine?

"Freeman Williams? He's amazing," said St. Mary's coach Frank LaPorte.

"He's very quick and jumps well," said Ted Wood, a sophomore St. Mary's guard and former Livermore High standout.

Some would have a slim chance of beating Jesse James to the draw. A few could eve nail Goliath with a sling shot. But to guard Freeman Williams? Try to lassoo a ghost.

"He gets up his shots so quickly," said Andy Pecota, the man assigned to guarding Fast Freeman most of the game.

"His quicknest. That's his best asset. He's a great offensive player," Pecota added.

"His shooting range is awesome. He's so good," noted Mathis.

Williams was at his best last week against George Fox College of Oregon when he rammed in 32 of 66 shots for 66 points.

His best effort? Nope.

"I scored 71 last year against Southern Louisiana," he said without a flinch.

You might think tossing up 40 or 50 shots a game would be resented by his teammates. Not so, according to Williams.

"The team knows what I'm supposed to do," he said. "There's no argument or conflict." "When Free gets hot, nobody complains," said Mathis. "And when he's cold he knows it and passes off. He's still a team player."

Williams acknowledged that wherever the team plays the headlines read "Williams-led Portland" or "Top Scorer and Portland State."

How does he handle the attention?

"I've been here four years and I'm the captain. So I should be the leader of the team," he said.

Any weakness Williams might have on defense is somewhat camouflaged by PSU's 2-3 zone.

"It's hard to tell how good or bad he is on defense because of the zone," Wood said.

Pecota wasn't so kind.

"He's nothing on defense, but probably could be because he's so quick," Pecota said.

St. Mary's assistant coach Rich Botelho said that Williams will have troubl e making it in the pros.

"He's great. But not great-great," reasoned Botelho. "He has trouble ballhandling."

Williams, sporting a sleek closly cropped beard and displaying facial features reminiscent of a young Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, was out of charcter in acknowledging his weakness.

"I work on defense all the time," he said. "No, I shouldn't have any trouble adjusting to the man-on-man. I played in the World Games this past summer."

.Although possibly lacking Jabbar's articulation, Williams obvious doesn't lack the NBA great's confidence.

"Right now I think I'm a first round draft choic," he said.

As for the location of his future club? "Since I grew up in Los Angeles, I'd like to play with the Lakers."

For the moment, he'll have to be content in trying to make the 8-7 Vikings a winner. And settle for being"only" a great player.

STARVING ARTISTS INCORPORATED, CALIFORNIA'S LEADING RETAILERS OF DECORATOR

Porsche: more power and new styling

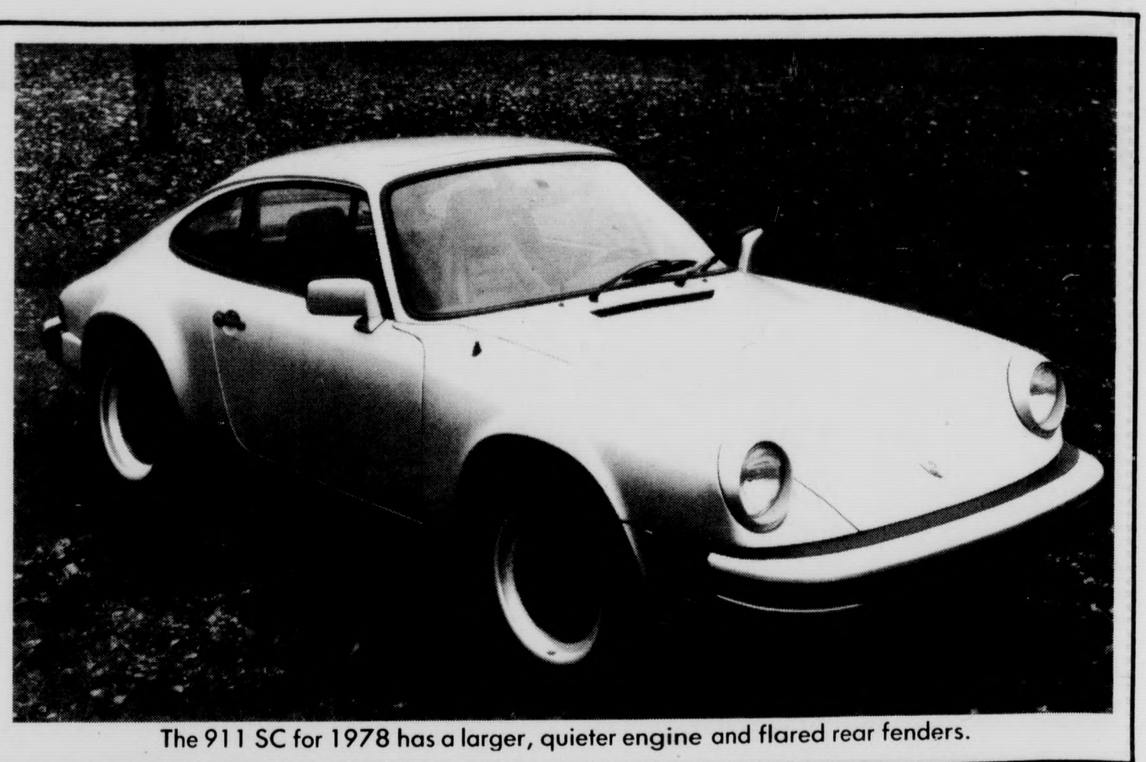
The 911 SC, the 1978 version of Porsche's traditional line, brings a feeling of unparalleled performance with an added dimension of luxury for the uncompromising sports car enthusiast.

For 1978 the six-cylinder, overhead cam engine has been enlarged by 300 cc to last year's Turbo dimensions — 3000 cc. With its normally-aspirated fuel injection system, the race-proven powerplant produces 172 horsepower at 5,500 RPM and 189 foot pounds of torque at 4,200 RPM. The 911 SC accelerates from 0 to 60 in about seven seconds, but with a new engine cooling fan and muffler, the larger engine is quieter than before. Equally impressive are the fuel economy figures from Environmental Protection Agency tests: 27 miles-per-gallon on the highway and 15 miles-per-gallon in the city.

Breakerless ignition and remote oil cooler mounted in the front fender are now standard equipment and redesigned exhaust piping keeps the engine cooler. A new clutch reduces pedal pressure.

Flared rear fenders, adopted from the European Porsche Carrera, are a dramatic feature on the 1978 Porsche 911 SC for the United States. The body is 1.65 inches wider to accommodate larger cast alloy wheels and tires and there is still room for optional forged alloy wheels and low profile tires. The SC is available in both coupe and Targa versions — the Targa, with its built-in roll bar and removable roof (which stores in the trunk compartment), is one of the few remaining convertibles sold in America.

Among the standard features of the 911 SC are five-speed Porsche synchromesh transmission, power-assisted four wheel disc brakes, and front and rear sway bars.



The 911 SC for 1978 has a larger, quieter engine and flared rear fenders.

GM exec makes a small car challenge

LOS ANGELES — Foreign car sales in the United States have "reached the high water mark" of their penetration of the subcompact segment of the new car market, an auto industry executive predicted here today.

Robert D. Lund, general manager of Chevrolet and a vice president of General Motors, told newsmen, "we intend to remain competitive in the subcompact segment challenging both foreign and domestic new entries to match the product quality, integrity of design, gas mileage, performance, utility, price and appearance of the Chevette.

"We believe foreign manufacturers have reached the high water mark of their penetration of the subcompact segment, and with Chevette as one of the hottest selling models in the California market today, we expect to continue to improve our share of that market segment during 1978."

Lund made his remarks during a preview of the Chevrolet exhibit for newsmen at the 56th Annual Greater Los Angeles Auto Show.

Highlighting the 1977 calendar year just ended, Lund said Southern California Chevrolet dealers had regained industry passenger car and truck sales leadership there for the first time in more than a decade.

"This reflects both the improved product and dealer sensitivity for the unique demands of the California consumer," Lund said. "We have made a good start here in California with our 1978 models, and we're committed to maintaining a major presence throughout the area both with our products and our marketing expertise."

Chevette sales, both nationally and in California, have been at record levels since the 1978 models were introduced last fall. In response to increased costs, Chevrolet announced a price increase last week of $100 on the two-door hatchback and $110 on the four-door hatchback.

"These new prices are still well below last year's comparably equipped models and most importantly, the Chevette's competitive position in relation to import vehicles will be better than its position at the beginning of the model year," Lund said. "We are, and intend to remain, competitive with the foreign manufacturers, not only with Chevette, but with other products in the marketplace here in California."

Lund also announced that Chevrolet will bring a special version of its successful Small Car Salesman's School to California during February. During October, November and December, the school was conducted for more than 5,000 Chevrolet dealers and salesmen at the GM Assembly Division Plant in Wilmington, Del.

Nationally, Chevrolet posted 1977 combined car and truck calendar year sales of 3,486,321, surpassing the 1976 total by 277,861 and second only to the 1973 record 3,538,848. As part of this achievement, the full-size Caprice and Impala Chevrolet regained its distinction as the number one selling nameplate in America with sales of 657,151, an increase of 186,943 over 1976. Truck sales were an all-time record 1,205,882, up 101,564 from the 1976 previous high.

Lund also noted that despite early limited availability of the new mid-size Monte Carlo and Malibu, sales momentum for the new 1978's was showing an upswing and Chevrolet was confident this trend would continue into the new year.

Reviewing current production, Chevrolet's passenger car fleet fuel economy based on 1978 production through November is running at 19.6 miles per gallon. This is both a 1.5 mile per gallon improvement over actual 1977 model year and ahead of the GM mileage target of about 19 miles per gallon for the total 1978 fleet average.

Plymouth's new Horizon offers front-wheel drive.

American-built Horizon

Plymouth's small car addition

DETROIT — Plymouth is expanding its product offerings to the Horizon — a new nameplate for a new generation of efficiency-sized, American-built cars.

The addition to the Plymouth line is a front-wheel-drive, four-passenger, four-door hatchback developed by American engineers specifically for American drivers and American roads, said Robert B. McCurry, Group Vice President of Chrysler's U.S. Automotive Sales.

"Horizon is a versatile, fuel and space efficent small car designed for today with tomarrow in mind. It can go virtually anywhere with ease and comfort," McCurry declared.

"It offers economy in purchase and operation, value, utility and function, and is fun to drive. While it is a small car, Horizon can seat four full-size persons in quiet comfort and the fold-down rear seat provides ample cargo area.

"There are a number of plusses including a wide range of options, colors and trims — the items this country's individualistic buyer wants but can't always obtain in other cars of Horizon's size."

The ride is another story, McCurry pointed out.

"Horizon is as much at ease on the interstate as it is on city streets. It has excellent ride qualities to provide driving confidence.

"The excellent handling level comes from such items as the traction and stability of Horizon's front-wheel drive; its suspension system with front and rear anti-sway features, and the response and precision of rack and pinion steering. A large glass area provides good visibility, too.

"Horizon, the first small U.S.-built front-wheel-drive car, is a new kind of car for America."

Production was scheduled for mid-November with public introduction set for after the first of the year.

Plymouth's new small car is built on a 99.2-inch (2520 mm) whelbase and is 164.8 inches (4186 mm) long. The width is 66.2 inches (1681 mm) and the height, 53.4 inches (1356 mm). The vehicle weight is slightly over a ton — 2,137 lbs. (969 kg).

Other key dimensions include: front track, 55.5 inches (1410 mm); rear track, 55.1 inches (1400 mm); effective head room, front 38.3 inches (973 mm); head room, rear, 37.4 inches (950 mm); shoulder room, front, 51.7 inches (1314 mm); shoulder room, rear, 51.5 inches (1309 mm); leg room, front, 41.8 inches (1062 mm); leg room, rear, 33.0 inches (838 mm); hip room, front 52.6 inches (1336 mm), and hip room, rear, 52.4 inches (1330 mm).

Horizon features a transverse (east-west) front-mounted 104.7-cubic-inch (1.7 litre), four-cylinder overhead cam engine with cast iron block and aluminum head. The engine, which has compression ration of 8.2:1, has the Electronic Lean Burn System with electronic ignition.

A four-speed manual transaxle is standard. A three-speed automatic transaxle will be offered as an option.

While it is offered in a single model and one basic price class, Horizon may be ordered with custom or premium interior and exterior trim packages tailored to the individual tastes and desires of the shopper. Another attractive exterior dress up option is a simulated wood grain decor package.

Horizon has a fully-independent Iso-Strut front suspension system, which uses low-rate coil springs, shock absorbing strut units, an anti-sway bar, and compliant rubber bushings to provide a comfortable ride and good handling characteristics.

Because Horizon is a front-engine, front-drive car, there is no need for a conventional rear axle with a differential housing.

Horizon has standard disc front and drum rear brakes. A power brake option with 227 mm (8.9 in.) booster is available for added ease of operation.

Glass-belted radial 155/80 x 13 white sidewall tires are standard. Other optional tire offerings include 165/75 x 13 steel-belted whitewall radials or glass-belted 165/75 x 13 tires with black or white walls.

Designers sought a unique but tasteful concept for Horizon's over-all appearance. Lines are clean and the car looks functional. The bright-finish grille, which has a finely textured design with small rectangular patterns, slopes gently to the rear aNd upward. Parking lamps curve into the fenders. Large rectangular taillamps contain the brakelamps, back-up lamps, running lamps and turn signals.

Glass areas are large for maximum driver-passenger visibility, and the glass is more nearly flush with metal surfaces than in earlier Chrysler designs.

Special design attention was given to Horizon's interior to provide the occupant with the feeling of roominess, comfort, quality, and all-around visibility a person expects sitting in a larger American car.

A wide selection of interiors is offered in standard, custom, and premium decor trims. The standard seats are all-vinyl, high-back buckets in a choice of blue, tan, red, or black. Five other bucket seat trims in high and low-back versions in vinyl, cloth and vinyl including crushed velour, are available.

Reclining seats come with the optional premium interior decor package, which also includes a simulated wood-grain instrument panel.

The easy-to-read instrument cluster, covered with acrylic plastic lens, houses the speedometer, ammeter, fuel and temperature gauges and optional clock and trip odometer.

Located to the right and left of these instruments are reminder and warning lights including high beams, seat belts, parking brake, and oil prssure.

A newly-designed ignition lock contains anti-theft pins that make forceful extraction of the lock mechanism difficult.

On the left side of the steering column is a multi-function control stalk for the turn signals, headlamp beams, and the windshield wiper and washer, which has a "pulse-wipe" feature. The "pluse-wipe" feature is useful when driving in light snow or mist — conditions, which may require only an occasional wipe of the blade.

A rear liftgate, counterbalanced by two gas cylinders, offers excellent access to the low-floor luggage compartment, which has a cargo capacity of about 289 cubic decimeters (10.2 cubic feet).

A security panel is standard and covers the top of the trunk area to block from outside view items stored in the luggage compartment.

The liftgate elevates a full 70 degrees for wide access. Front doors open wide to 65 degrees and the rear doors, 70 degrees, for easy entry and exit.

In addition to the white sidewall tires and rear shelf panel, other standard items include AM radio, bumper nerf strips, inside hood release, vinyl body side molding, cigar lighter, and right front dome lamp switch.

Among Horizon's options is a factory-installed, multi-function, all-seasons roof rack, with cross bars and posts which can be removed and stored when not in use.

Chrysler posts sales

DETROIT — Chrysler Corporation reported today the company sold 1,341,014 passenger cars in 1977 and a record 469,161 trucks.

During 1976, the firm reported 1,380,912 car and 430,235 truck sales.

"Chrysler reflected gains in the subcompact and intermediate car segments and in the truck market," said R.K. Brown, Exective Vice President-North American Automotive.

"Our new Chrysler LeBaron and Dodge Diplomat have been instrumental in boosting Chrysler's share in the intermediate market to an estimated 17.5 percent during the final quarter of 1977. That is a 5.5 point increase over the same period in 1976," Brown pointed out.

Total Plymouth Volare and Dodge Aspen compact sales surpassed introductory year sales and the Volare Wagon, based on R.L. Polk registrations through October, is the Number One station wagon in the country, Brown said.

Subcompact Plymouth Arrow and Dodge Colt sales were up nearly 50 percent over 1976 and the standard-size Chrysler New Yorker and Newport sales increased nearly two percentage points.

"Truck sales bested the previous record year of 1976 by nine percent," Brown said, "and on a monthly basis have established new records in 10 of the past 12 months.

"During 1977, our popular van sales jumped 27 percent; the utility Dodge Ramcharger and Plymouth Trail Duster, more than 19 percent, and pickup trucks, nearly 12 percent.

"While car sales throughout the industry softened towards the end of 1977, we look for an upturn for 1978. All the economic factors are positive."

"We will be launching our all-new Plymouth Horizon and Dodge Omni on January 16. These should help improve first quarter sales substantially," Brown said.

For the month of December, with 26 selling days the same as in 1976, the daily sales rate for cars was 2,966 units and trucks, 1,252.

Last December, the daily rate for cars was 3,675 and trucks, 1,311.

Plan to rebuild inner city

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Housing and Urban Development announced Wednesday that it hopes to rebuild its disastrous new communities program with a "new town-in town" concept that would aid development in inner cities.

"The idea is to develop the land already cleared by urban renewal or urban decay," says New Communities Development Corp. director John White. HUD Secretary Patricia Harris also said she has ordered the HUD inspector general to audit new communities that went bankrupt.

The original new towns approach, a Nixon administration program, was an extremely expensive attempt to build 13 socially balanced new cities from scratch as an antedote to urban sprawl. But the housing and development market plummeted, and the program's mechanism for financing was flawed, and seven new towns went broke.

HUD still will aid six original new communities under the change in direction announced Wednesday, but the focus will be on inner-city projects.

Currently there is a moratorium on funding for new communities and HUD will have to seek Congress' approval for the inner city approach. More than 40 project proposals already are under review at HUD.

"Our emphasis (in aiding the original 13 new towns) is on the new communities that have a potential to work," said White in a recent interview.

He said the viable new communities include The Woodlands, near Houston, Texas; St. Charles, Md., near Washington, D.C., Harbison, S.C., and Shenandoah, Ga. He also held out hope for Maumelle, near Little Rock, Ark., and Soul City, N.C.

Financial failures have included HUD's only previous new town-in town commitment, Cedar-Riverside in Minneapolis, as well as Riverton and Gananda, in upper New York; Jonathan, in Minnesota; Flower Mound, near Dallas; Park Forest South, near Chicago; and Newfields, near Dayton, Ohio.

"The financing mechanism was suicidal," under the original new communities approach, said White, "It never worked. Now we want to work in the inner cities."

HUD Secretary Mrs. Harris said her office has closed down Gananda, Newfields and Riverton, towns which she said should have been terminated by the previous administration.

"The last administration left a messy trail of failures," she said in announcing the financial audit.

"Our job now is to make certain that there was no wrongdoing committed in the past operation of the New Communities program," she said. "This is not a witch hunt, but a sound business decision."

Mrs. Harris emphasized that she knows of no fraud in the New Communities program, but said if there was "hankypanky I want to know about it now." She said that "indecisiveness and lack of direction allowed these towns to stagnate at a cost of thousands, if not millions, of dollars."

Projects in Detroit, Milwaukee, Washington, D.C., St. Louis, and Boston are among the most promising inner city proposals, says White.

Ag preserve bill survives attack

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A bill aimed at preserving prime farm land from urban sprawl narrowly survived attack in a legislative committee Wednesday. The Assembly Ways and Means Committee, by a 9-10 vote, refused to write an appropriation into the bill by Assemblyman Victor Calvo, D-Mountain View.

If approved, the amendment would have required a twothirds majority, or 54 votes, on the floor to approve the bill. Without it, it needs only a simple majority, or 41 votes.

Since it didn't appear that he had the 11 votes needed to get the bill out of the 21-member committee, Calvo put off a vote until next Monday. A key vote is that of Assemblyman John Knox, D-Richmond, who said he couldn't support it unless it is amended to exempt a development in his district. He said the developer has gotten local approval and spent money on plans but has not started construction.

Knox said an exemption in Calvo's bill — for land in which people have "a vested right" for other than agriculture use — wouldn't cover the case. A court decision said "vested right" required the construction be started, Knox said.

Calvo said he believed he could work out an amendment to cover Knox's objection.

The bill is supported by environmental and church groups and by the League of California Cities.

Farm, business and labor organization are lined up with the County Supervisors Association in opposition. They support a pending Senate bill which would give local authorities more power, and the state less power, to say which farm land should be preserved.

Big phone hike bid could mean $5 jump

A hefty boost in telephone rates and service charges is being sought by Pacific Telephone to offset "continued inflationary pressures."

In advising the Public Utilities Commission of its intent to file that application within 60 days, Pacific Telephone said the higher prices would total some $471 million in new annual revenues.

The proposed schedule would boost the monthly bill of a typical residential customer from $13.15 to $18.35. The flat - rate monthly service charge for a residential customer would increase from $5.70 to $7. There would be no change in the basic "lifeline" rate of $2.50 for a maximum of 30 calls.

Developer pledges 10 acres for SR parks

SAN RAMON — Three playing fields are planned for a newly designated park site located in the Twin Creeks Hill subdivision along Bollinger Canyon Road, west of San Ramon Valley Boulevard.

At last week's R-7 Parks Advisory Committee meeting, it was revealed that talks with Supervisor Eric Hasseltine and the developer of Twin Creeks, Carl Dame, had resulted in an agreement for the dedication of 10 acres of land for the much needed playing fields and a parking lot.

According to staff member Tom Hanson, the exact location of the land withinthe development has yet to be decided.

As a result of that agreement, the committee voted against an option to purchase 12 acres located near Norris Canyon Road and Twin Creeks Drive offered last month by developer Philip Kamerer of Citation Builders.

Most committee members felt that with the recent decision to purchase land for an 18 acre community park at Bollinger Canyon Road and Alcosta Boulevard, plus the 10 acres dedicated in the Twin Creeks area, the minimum park needs of the southern Valley would be met, and their budget could not be stretched further.

"It's something I hate to do," commented R-7 member Sandy Myers. "I think we need the land, but I don't see the dollars."

"Another member, Frankie Ross, added, "I'm afraid the hidden maintenance costs are really going to come back to haunt us. We already have several large parcels we're going to have to take care of."

Summing it up, past Chairman Bob Beratta said, "I'm tired of being in the real estate business. I think it's time we cut off buying land and start doing something with it before they (Valley residents) shoot us, one by one."

Though the committee agreed to pass this one up, one more real estate question was discussed, the possible purchase of seven acres located at Del Amigo Road and Danville Boulevard. R-7 has been interested in this piece for several years because of its central location, but has met with unwilling sellers and prohibitive prices.

Jim Fears from the county staff reported that Supervisor Hasseltine has inquired into whether the Cunty Retirement Board would fund the acquisition.

"They said they would consider a proposal at 10 per cent interest over an eight-year period. Now, this dosen't mean they'll do it, bit they'll consider it."

An estimate of $250,000 was mentioned as a possible purchase price, meaning payments of $45,000 a year for R-7, which they felt they could handle.

"And this is if the owner wants to sell which we don't know yet," added Fears.

The current owner, San Jose Construction Company, has submitted a plan to construct 26 single family homes on the site, according to R-7 staff.

"If we have an unwilling seller and look at condemnation, the question is how fast can we move. That's where our risk is as I see it," said Fears.

"We have to have the money in the bank at the time we file," noted Rich McNeely, committee memver and lawyer.

There was considerable indecision amg members about pursuing this, expecially if we can get a long term deal."

It was decided the most prudent move would be to determine the owner's feeling about selling. Once that is known, the subject will be reconsidered.

In other business, a tentative procedure for determining part dedication credit for provate recreational facilities was approved for submission ti the county planning staff, Supervisor Hasseltine and the San Ramon Valley Planning Commission.

Hanson concluded, "It's a pretty fair and consistent approach to granting credit. Everyone knows before they get into it what is expected. When comments are received back and general agreement has been reached, and informational packet will be prepared for use by the planning staff and developers.

Basically, R-7 recommends that credit for private neighborhood recreation facilities not exceed 50 per cent of the total acreage required by the Park Dedication Ordinance.

The Park Dedication Ordinance was scheduled for approval by the board of supervisors Jan. 10 and will be in effect 30 days after that date.

Appraiser to seek key CC post

Carl S. Rush.

MARTINEZ — Carl S. Rush, chief appraiser with the Contra Costa County Assessor's Office, has announced he will seek the position of County Assessor to succeed the retiring incumbent, E.F. "Fred" Wanaka.

Rush was first employed in the assessor's office in 1950 as a field appraiser. He has advanced to the top appraisal job in the office after being appointed Chief Appraiser in 1967.

Rush, 54, is a resident of Martinez.

As the Chief Appraiser, Rush has been responsible for the operation and administration of the assessor's valuation division. This division consists of roughly 140 appraisers, auditor-appraisers and clerical employees of the total 195 person staff.

He is a member of the American Institue of Real Estate Appraisers (MAI), an affiliate member of the Contra Costa Real Estate Board, belongs to the International Association of Assessing Officers and the California State-Association of County Assessors.

In the 1960's Rush was an instructor in Real Estate Appraisal courses at Diablo Valley College. He holds a Real Estate Certificate from the University of California plus an Advanced Appraisal Certificate from the California State Board of Equalization. He is a retired reserve Army officer.

"If I am successful in my candidacy, I will exert every effort to insure that the interests of the taxpayers of Contra Costa are protected. This includes continuing to press our legislative representatives to speedily enact property tax relief measures which have been promised so long and are needed so badly," Rush said.
